Film Actor Shot Taylor?

FILM STARS TO ORGANIZE SOON

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6.—A million dollar corporation whose purpose will be "to obtain a fair financial return" from pictures produced by independent film stars, will probably result from a meeting at the home of Douglas Fairbanks last Thursday night was learned today.

Those subscribing to the organization are Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Charley Chaplin, Pola Negri, Harold Lloyd, Constance and Norma Talmadge, the Jackie Coogan interests and D. W. Griffith, it was declared by Joseph M. Schenck, who has joined forces with the United Artists.

Schenck declared that in many cities film exhibitors have combined and instead of paying the actual value for rental of a big feature to independent producers, make their own offer at a very much lower figure, under the threat that if the offer is not accepted the production cannot be shown in that particular city because of the exhibitors' agreement.

To combat this situation, the new organization will bring counter-pressure to bear, Schenck said.

The system will be combatted by newspaper advertising and if it persists the organization will go into such town and build theaters out of their capital stock. Sol Lesser, owner of a chain of 100 theaters in California in which Schenck is interested, has offered to build a theater in any city where such a situation exists, he states.

ANOTHER CANAL PLANNED

United States to Build Waterway With Profits Made From Panama Canal.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—This government is planning to build another canal in the vicinity of the Panama canal with the profit derived from the latter, it was said at the white house today.

This, however, is an ultimate object of the government, and probably will not be consummated for some time yet.

Two probable locations have been suggested: The abandoned site of the proposed canal thru Nicaragua and a tidewater canal at Panama.

The present canal is operating now only up to a 40 per cent capacity. It cleared $1,500,000 in profits during January of this year, according to a report which Secretary of War Weeks made to the cabinet today, when the whole project was discussed.

DRAG LAKE FOR OMAHA MAN

Had Skated Across to Have Dinner With a Friend.

OMAHA, Feb. 6.—Jerome P. Magee, forty-three, living at the Omaha club, was sought for several hours last night with grappling hooks in the hands of a squad of police and by a park patrol headed by Park Commissioner J. B. Hummel, until it was learned after five hours that he was safe.

Magee skated out on Carter lake from the caretaker's station at the muny beach at 3 o'clock, leaving his car, dress shoes and overcoat at the building, and was not heard from until after 9 o'clock, when he phoned from the Carter Lake club that he was safe, Park Commissioner Hummel said.

When he failed to return at dusk, the caretaker notified the commissioner, who in turn notified police. The officers dragged the lake where water holes were located for several hours.

Magee had skated across the lake to have dinner with a friend, it was announced.

REXILIUS DENIES STORY

Seeks Reversal in Supreme Court of Judgment Secured by Ithaca Young Woman.

A town scandal was aired in supreme court Tuesday when the appeal of Emil Rexilius, Saunders county farmer's son, from a finding in Lancaster county that he was the father of a child born to Louisa Kraft, daughter of a storekeeper in Ithaca, was argued and submitted. Rexilius' attorney told the court that the action had been brought after a demand had been made upon him for the payment of $5,000, or he would be sent to prison, and he had answered he would kill himself before he would go to the rock pile. His claim is that the girl is seeking to hold him responsible for the acts of another, and that he is entirely innocent. He is now married to a neighbor's daughter, who testified that he was with her and not the other girl on one occasion. He insisted also that the trial court robbed him of substantial rights, among which was to show that the girl had been friendly with other young men in the town. The lower court ordered him to give bond in the sum of $3,000 for the support of the child.

The girl said he had paid her attentions for a long time, and that his stories of her conduct with other boys was without foundation. She said that at one time he threatened to get out a circular letter and have the boys in Ithaca sign it.

De Buhr declared he owned $6,000 worth of stock in the Hayes company, which was selling the land, and that he traded it in as part payment on sixty acres of land. He said he never finished the payments on the land and never received title to it.

Matsen declared that Ben Brainard, St. Louis representative of the company and one of the defendants, persuaded him to buy a tract of the land.

"Brainard said the land would grow everything under the sun," Matsen testified. "Later I learned the lands were worthless."

"I saw some white stuff on the ground which looked funny to me," he said.

EDWIN JAMES PASSES AWAY

Pioneer of Gage County Dies in Beatrice Hospital.

WYMORE, Neb., Feb. 6.—Edwin James, seventy-three years old, extensive property owner and one of the pioneer settlers here, a resident of Marshall County, Kansas, for twenty years, and of Gage County, Neb., for thirty-six years, died at a Beatrice hospital early Monday morning, death being due to a complication of kidney troubles. An operation was performed five days ago. Mr. James was born in Wales, and came to America when a young man, spending a short time in eastern states, and getting on land near Oketo, Kansas, in 1867. He removed to Blue Springs, just north of here, in 1886, a few years after the railway was built thru, and retired to Beatrice about a year ago. His home in Blue Springs was one of the first houses built there, being made of rubble stones taken from the land nearby, and which still stands. Besides this property, and the Beatrice and Wymore property, he owned the 160 acres of land near Oketo and a farm near Blue Springs at his death. He sold 10 acres of land, containing large springs, to the cities of Wymore and Blue Springs fifteen years ago from which the present splendid, pure water supply is obtained, and received a price of $600 an acre for it. He is survived by the aged widow, of Beatrice, and seven children, who are, Mrs. Bertha Roop, of Chicago; Grover, of Wymore; Mrs. Nellie Cordell, of Omaha; Mrs. Vesta Snapp, Oketo; Mrs. Myrtle Retchless, Blue Springs; Mrs. Ethel Lewis, Liberty; and Sheldon, of Beatrice.

Raid in Buffalo County.

GIBBON, Neb., Feb. 6.—Two groups of sheriffs and deputies and other raiding officers spread themselves simultaneously over a wide territory so that the violators had no opportunity to warn each other and were caught unawares. Suspicous evidences were found at several other places and specific charges may yet land where they are the least suspected. The newly elected county attorney, Mr. Drake, has brought about many arrests and his administration is showing results in the keeping of the eighteenth amendment.

WILL REOPEN TAYLOR CASE

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6.—Information given by a dope peddler to department of justice agents has led to a reopening of the case of William Desmond Taylor, slain film director, it was learned today.

While department of justice agents refused to make known details of the matter, it was reported unofficially that the dope peddler declared that a movie actor whom Taylor had befriended fell in love with a film actress, mentioned prominently in connection with the case during the murder investigation and that as Taylor was also in love with her, a quarrel ensued.

The report stated that movie actor was reported to be a user of drugs and that following the murder various phases of the "triangle" situation were freely discussed in underworld circles.

Both police and department of justice agents are checking up the man's statements.

The name of a prominent actress of the legitimate stage is also said to be mentioned in the information in the hands of the department of justice agents.

They refused, however, to disclose any names at the present time, declaring that it would be necessary to check all statements contained in the report very carefully.

Much of the data in the affair is said to have come from department of justice agents in another Pacific coast city. Agents here refused to give any intimation as to whether or not this was San Francisco.

Taylor is said to have taken the movie actor in question into his home for several months. The man much younger than Taylor, it was reported, and became enamoured of a movie actress of whom Taylor was very fond.

The case is also being investigated by the police. They declared they would give out no information whatsoever "until the proper time comes."

About $44,000,000 would be returned out of a total of $350,000,000.

Incomes from the trusts held by the alien property custodian would be paid to the owners instead of being accumulated in the treasury as at present, under a provision of the bill. This was estimated to involve between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000 annually.

TURKS YIELD ON MAIN POINT

WAR THREAT IS AVERTED

Turks Find They Made Mistake at Lausanne.

WILL ACCEPT SAFEGUARDS

Ismet Anxious for Resumption of the Parley.

Poincare Permits It to Be Understood That He Still Wishes Allies to Negotiate Together.

Great Britain played a waiting game with the Turks today, while France struggled to revive the almost extinct Lausanne conclave.

The British cabinet met, reviewed plans for possible defensive warfare in the near east, and let the Kemalists understand that they now could come to London if they had anything further to say regarding the treaty Ismet Pasha rejected Sunday.

Meanwhile the foreign office bombarded the Quai d'Orsay with notes requesting explanation of Poincare's note to Angora which the British feel strengthened Turkey's hand to a point where defiance of the allies became an apparent possibility.

The entente is far from secure, with the British now ready to end it, withdraw from the Ruhr and hold out alone in the near east by seizing Constantinople and rushing a strong fleet into Turkish waters. Britain counts on assistance of strong Greek troops in Thrace.

The French are beginning to feel they have more to lose than Great Britain if the Lausanne parley ends, and were stressing Ismet Pasha's avowed willingness to give way on judicial guarantees and even sign the treaty as a last resort, rather than break openly with Britain. The Turks depart Saturday, but will follow the example of the French and British and leave secretaries behind in case Poincare is successful in reviving the parley.

The Russians, whose presence at Lausanne has been overlooked for a day or two, asked today: "What about the straits?" Tchitcherin said he expected to hear from the allies on this subject immediately.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—Turkey has capitulated on the chief point under dispute at the Lausanne conference and threat of immediate war in the near east is somewhat further averted.

After the British had withdrawn from the parley and the French had made preparations to follow, Ismet Pasha, Turkish spokesman, apparently realized he had made a mistake.

The Turk sent word to Paris by M. Bomparde, French delegate, as follows:

"I am ready to accept judicial safeguards. I understand that the allies agree to defer economic clauses of the treaty for further discussion."

Word to this effect was immediately forwarded to London, according to semi-official advices, where the British cabinet was considering the situation in the light of Britain being called upon to defend her interests in the near east.

Ismet Pasha intimated he now feels the next move should come from the allies. Until France and Britain agree as to what shall be done, continuance or abandonment of the Lausanne parley is in the balance.

The Turkish delegate wishes to return to Angora to confer with his government. He is anxious to have the conference resumed.

Whether Britain will agree to resume discussions with the Turks, in view of Ismet's tardy backdown, was a question in which Paris was vitally interested today.

Premier Poincare sent a note to Great Britain and to Italy suggesting the allies should resume negotiations with the Turks. Italy replied favorably; the British reply was delayed.

Poincare permitted it to be understood that despite his recent note to Angora which caused such a stir in England, he still wishes the allies to remain united and not negotiate separately with the Kemalists.

M. Bompard is understood to have informed Poincare that the Turks are ready to sign the treaty.

Ismet Pasha, however, only indicated a willingness to give in on the point of judicial guarantees, whereby at the allies insistence, the Angora government agrees that foreigners tried in Turkey shall have a hearing before a mixed tribunal and shall have the rights and privileges enjoyed by accused persons in their native lands.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—At 10 a. m. today the British government was stated to be without official confirmation of Paris dispatches stating that Ismet Pasha had given way on the question of judicial safeguards, the rock upon which the Lausanne conference split. The cabinet met to consider the situation.

APPOINT NEW MEMBER OF THE STATE BOARD OF CONTROL

Mrs. Frank Birss of Omaha who will succeed Miss Katherine F. Worley on the state board of control when her term will expire July 1.

LOWER FARE ON RAILROAD

HOUSE SMILES UPON THE NEBRASKA CLERGYMEN.

Members Kill Bill Relating Only to Douglas County and Then Turn About in Tracks and Pass It.

The house Tuesday morning passed H. R. 62, giving railroad companies permission to sell clergymen, theological students traveling to fill pulpits and mission field workers, mileage or transportation at reduced fare. The vote was 76 to 4. Representative Jacoby opposed. He said that it will put railroads back into politics and that only such ministers as will do as the railroads say, will get reduced fares.

The members stepped on a bill applicable alone to Douglas county. After the rules were spread a bit and representatives saw what they had done, they right-about-faced and passed the bill. The bill is H. R. 172. It increases the number of appraisers from six to three in proceedings by corporations for property condemnation under the power of eminent domain and amends the law so that such power of eminent domain shall apply only to counties of more than 100,000 population.

Representative Dyball, when he learned that the bill had been knocked over by a vote of 43 to 37, stood by his seat and told the members that they had acted beyond his understanding. Then it was that members began to switch. The clerk called the roll again and the bill passed 77 to 4. The only members voting in the negative being: Beaushausen, Moore, Axtell and Gallagher. Other bills placed on third reading:

H. R. 30, by Bock—Provides that beginning with 1924, town meetings shall be held on the second Tuesday in January instead of the first Tuesday in March. Boards shall hold first meeting to audit accounts on the first Thursday after the first Tuesday in January. The vote was 73 to 8.

H. R. 81, by Gould—Petition by 51 per cent of owners of property subject to assessment for sewer construction shall be sufficient to prevent such improvement. Passed 78 to 2. Representatives Densmore and Whitehead voting in the negative. Mr. Whitehead said that it will permit non-resident owners to block public improvements.

H. R. 97, by Gallagher and Thatcher—Includes judge with court in matter of determining constructive service in divorce action. Passed 80 to 0.

H. R. 104, by Densmore—Increases maximum levy for mothers' pension from one-tenth to two-tenths mills. Emergency. Passed 72 to 0.

H. R. 129, by Dyball—Authorizing Benevolent, Patriotic Order of Does of the United States to incorporate in Nebraska. Passed 82 to 0.

H. R. 156, providing that cities of 2,000 or more may adopt commission form of government. Under present law, 5,000 is the minimum. Passed 81 to 1.

SANFORD LEFT TWO WILLS

Two wills of Arthur Sanford, once of Red Willow county, are presented to the supreme court, in an appeal case just filed, and it is for that tribunal to say which was the last valid instrument. Sanford had been a farm hired man most of his life, living with the Greninger family for years. He left a little estate of $2,400. After his death his step-sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Meredith, presented a will executed January 3, 1922, in which the estate was divided between her and her sister, Philobel McKinnie. J. F. Greninger presented one signed January 8, 1922, in which he was given all that was left after bequests of $100 each to the two sisters and to Emma Bartlett, a cousin. The sisters said this will was secured by undue influence exercised by Greninger and when Sanford was not in mental condition to make a will. Greninger said that he had been given the property because he had kept and cared for the old man for years. The district court upheld the Greninger will.

HEARING ON CLASS RATES

ENTIRE STRUCTURE TO GO UNDER COMMISSION MICROSCOPE.

Commissioners From Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri to Meet With Federal Body and Settle Many Disputes.

A telegram from the interstate commerce commission, received Tuesday morning by Chairman Taylor of the state railway commission, gave information that all of the class rates now in effect in Nebraska and on the edge of Missouri and Kansas were to go under the commission microscope within a short time.

Years ago, when Nebraska had undisputed control over all intrastate rates, it issued an order materially reducing the old class rates, which apply particularly to merchandise and are of great importance to jobbing cities. These had the effect of making lower rates for hauls in the state than the railroads were charging for hauls from the jobbing cities located along the river, and outside the state borders, like Sioux City, Council Bluffs, Kansas City and St. Joseph.

These river jobbing points went to the interstate commerce commission and being able to show that this discriminated against them and restricted the jobbing territory into which they had for years been freely admitted, obtained an order on the railroads to remove this discrimination. They did it by raising the state rates.

Since much of the power over state rates has been restored to the Nebraska commission it has been urging upon the interstate commerce commission that the entire schedule of rates, interstate and intrastate, insofar as they affect the jobbing territory in question, ought to be inquired into, and as both kinds of rates were involved, that joint action be taken.

The telegram received by Mr. Taylor Tuesday gives cordial endorsement to this plan. According to the interstate commerce commission announcement, it will shortly fix a date when it will meet with commissioners representing the three states interested, Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri, hold a joint hearing and confer about what is a proper relation between these rates.

The inquiry will be into all class rates applicable between Missouri river jobbing points that were parties to the litigation referred to previously, including all Kansas points on the Missouri river on one hand and all Nebraska stations in relation to the entire body of class rates between all Nebraska points, including Nebraska jobbing points named, on the other hand.

MORE CARS BEING LOADED

Missouri Pacific Sends Out Double the Number Shipped for Previous Week.

The state railway commission has wired the car service division of the American railway association for further aid on getting more cars for the Missouri Pacific lines, the only ones on which a grain congestion now exists. Twenty-five out of the seventy-four elevators on its Nebraska lines were closed Saturday evening because they cannot buy any more grain until some of that on hand is shipped. Many of the other elevators are in little better shape, opening for a few days and closing again because the farmers hurry in with their stuff when their turn comes. The situation still calls for aid, and the commission is insisting that it be granted. For the week ending last Saturday 108 cars of grain were moved, as compared with 50 the previous week.

SENATE MAY YET CANDLE ITS EGGS

No Immediate Action on Governor Bryan's Veto of Bill Reducing Salaries of Six Code Secretaries.

The senate took no action Tuesday morning on Governor Bryan's veto of S. F. 1, the bill reducing salaries of code secretaries. Senator Reed, introducer, said he had not made up his mind about asking for a vote of the senate on the veto and had not talked to other members about it. He is confident the senate can override the governor's veto. A three-fifths vote, or twenty votes, is necessary in the senate, but if the house fails to give that majority it will be useless to test the matter in the senate. Some members desire a vote on the question of sustaining the veto and contend that the constitution requires the question to be put regardless of whether a vote would change the result.

At the forenoon session of the senate, S. F. 101, the egg candling bill, was reported out by the committee on miscellaneous subjects, for the general file with amendments. The committee adopted all amendments adopted in the committee of the whole Monday and did not disturb the license feature nor strike out the clause which requires the department of agriculture to enforce the bill. The committee struck out that part authorizing the department to make investigations and inspections in connection with the business of candling eggs.

It is alleged big dealers favor the bill. It is desired on the ground that it will enhance the price of eggs shipped to New York. The little red hen in Nebraska is now deemed one of the most important industries. The bill exempts farmers from candling.

On motion of Anderson of Lancaster S. F. 20, the third degree bill, was recommitted for the purpose of amendment. It is proposed to make the bill conform to the Illinois law which makes it unlawful to use more force than necessary in making arrests or to assault or imprison a person for the purpose of obtaining a confession or revelation.

S. F. 58, by Smrha, to prohibit bankers or employes from acting as notaries public in matters affecting the bank, was indefinitely postponed on recommendation of the judiciary committee. Among the bills that went to the general file were: S. F. 62, for election of all county commissioners at one election; S. F. 117, making county assessors eligible to two terms; S. F. 60, to authorize the Omaha welfare board to approve or disapprove licenses for boxing or wrestling matches in that city.

REVIVE "PEP" AT MEETING

TEACHERS' SALARY SCHEDULE WAKES UP THE MEMBERS.

Board of Education Discusses Policies Relating to Tapping of Willard Water Mains and Selling of Real Estate.

Matters of general policy rather than definite action occupied most of the board of education session meeting Tuesday morning. The unanimity of opinion of recent months which has produced a degree of harmony almost uninteresting, was dissolved thru questions by Charles Stuart relating to the teachers' salary schedule. Mr. Stuart had supposed the schedule disappeared a year ago by vote of the board, but learned thru the superintendent that a three-year trial adopted for new teachers was the only change made. Mr. Henkle reinforced Mr. Stuart in declaring teachers, like business employes, should be paid according to individual merit and not according to schedule. M. L. Palmer oiled the situation by warning meddlers with the system to keep hands off until they had something better to offer. The lowest amount now paid Lincoln teachers is $1,000 for the year. Normal school graduates can advance to $1,500 and university graduates to $2,000.

The endorsement of the sale of lot 2, block 8, Woodcrest addition, for $1,000, and an offer for three other lots in the same addition, resulted in a resolution that an endeavor be made to get a cash offer for the remainder of the tract and relieve the board from real estate transactions. The tract was procured some years

COUNTY MUST PAY THE BILL

REFUSES TO REIMBURSE BOYD FOR MURDER TRIAL.

House Committee Recommends Bill for Indefinite Postponement and No Objection Made to That Disposition.

Just because Boyd county is small and that payment of $5,300 for expenses of a murder trial strains her slender resources is not regarded by the house committee on miscellaneous subjects as any good reason why the state should reimburse her. The committee reported for the axe Tuesday morning a bill introduced by Representative Thatcher by which that sum was to be paid out of the state treasury to reimburse Boyd county for the successful prosecution of Walter H. Simmons, a non-resident who selected that county as the place in which to murder a traveling companion. It was contended that the prosecution was for the benefit of the entire state.

H. R. 311, by Hefferman, fixing the commissions to be charged by livestock commission agents at stockyards was reported back by this committee with the suggestion that it properly belongs to the livestock and grazing committee.

H. R. 293, by Mitchell, to reimburse Sheriff Dan Templeton for the $300 expenses he incurred in a lawsuit, was recommended for indefinite postponement.

The state realtors' licensing bill, introduced by Harrington, was unfavorably reported on, and is on the list for slaughter. So is No. 19, by Vance, allowing a 20 per cent margin over cost of grain and hay to be charged for feeding livestock in transit.

The only bill reported out from committees Tuesday morning for favorable consideration was H. R. 269, by Vance and Rourke, to make the Nebraska bushel conform to the federal standard in cubic inches.

The Madison county farm bureau, 100 strong, sent in a resoultion protesting against Governor Bryan's cutting out of bovine tuberculosis eradication work, asking for a "$300,000 appropriation, and also that the department of agriculture be retained.

A petition signed by a number of potato growers, asking that the compulsory grading law be repealed, and that the growers have the option of having federal inspection, was received.

The national association of railway commissioners, in a communication, asked that the "indeterminate permit" instead of the limited term franchies for public utilities be favorably considered in legislation. The present method intereferes with proper financing, and in the end this is against the public interest.

ROHRER PUTS ON COMEBACK

ONE BELL BOY ARRESTED AT THE ROME HOTEL.

Second Omaha Hotel Raid, Following Criticism by Washington Sleuth, as Void of Results as the First.

The temporary injunction applied for immediately after the raid on the Fontenelle hotel in Omaha last week, was served in Lincoln Tuesday on Frank E Schaaf as president of the Interstate Hotel company. It directs this company and also the Douglas and Eppley Hotel companies and E. C. Eppley, to refrain from using any of the rooms or contents of the hotel toward violating the national prohibition act, or removing or interfering with any intoxicating liquor or any furniture or fixtures in the hotel.

OMAHA, Feb. 6.—Omaha was interested in the story that U. S. Rohrer had raided the Rome hotel. The fact was that one lone bell boy had been arrested at the Rome. It was said Rohrer had warrants for others. This followed the raid made on the Fontenelle recently by Bob Samardick, a free lance rum sleuth working out of Minneapolis headquarters for law enforcement. Samardick lives at the Rome.

A hotel fight is on in Omaha with the law enforcement officers playing, wittingly or unwittingly, into the hands of those engaged in the trouble. In neither raid were great results obtained. In neither raid was the quantity of liquor obtained sufficient to have supplied one customer. Records of sales previous to the raids were said to have been obtained and much evidence showing that liquor had been sold, but the amount of liquor taken was not boasted of.

In reference to the Fontenelle raid the hotel management made this statement today:

"Contrary to reports, the Fontenelle hotel in Omaha has not been closed, but is being operated as usual and the management expects to so continue. The recent boozeless visit and search of the hotel by prohibition agents revealed no intoxicating liquors on the premises nor is the Fontenelle or its employes engaged in anything but a clean, legitimate, high class hotel business."

Rohrer claims to have a record of repeated booze purchases made by his agents. Samardick made the same claim. Rohrer resents the activity of Samardick in Omaha. Elmer Thomas has been fighting Rohrer. The charge was made by Samardick that the big hotels had been permitted to get by without trouble. Samardick raided the Fontenelle and arrested several bell boys. Rohrer's answer is to raid the Rome hotel and arrest one bell boy.

Meanwhile people in Omaha tell where contraband stuff can be secured and say without reservation that some people drink it and really live for a time after doing so.

TWO GERMANS KILLED BY FRENCH SOLDIERS

Newly Occupied Territory Is Scene of Tragedies, Weisbaden Reports.

MOST OF THE RUHR IS QUIET

French Fail to Cut Traffic on Baden Lines.

CUNO RETURNS TO BERLIN

Had Been in Rhineland Strengthening Morale of Populace Against the Accomplished Occupation.

MUENSTER, Feb. 6.—Two Germans were killed by French troops in the newly occupied territory today, according to reports from Weisbaden.

Outside of these isolated instances the Ruhr and the Rhineland were quiet, the French having failed to put into effect their threat to cut traffic on the Berlin-Switzerland main lines north of Baden.

Germany refused to enforce resumption of the international trains on the Paris-Prague and Paris-Orient lines, and France had threatened to pervent rail traffic to Switzerland, but this was not done.

Finance Minister Herms came to the Ruhr today following return of Chancellor Cuno to Berlin.

MUENSTER, Feb. 6.—Germany will hold out to the last, Chancellor Cuno touring the occupied areas and those threatened with invasion, pledged in a speech here last night.

In an appeal for unity and support of the government, the chancellor said:

"If we do not stand together now, the republic is lost."

Cuno charged that the French invasion was carried out for none of the reasons given, but was a "stretching of her hand toward added territory in which there is coal and coke."

The chancellor is barnstorming the border zones, attempting to stiffen the populace's resistance to the French, which weakened considerably within the last week. Even as he was speaking the French were pushing forward into Hesse, occupying Goddelau.

German miners in the Saar basin struck yesterday, but for more wages, according to their spokesman. The mines of the Saar have been under French control since the Versailles treaty awarded them as compensation for damages done in northern France in the war.

The day began quietly in the Ruhr, with interest centering in a visit of Hugo Stinnes to Essen, where the famous German industrial is reported to have conferred with Grimy Westphalian miners in a dramatic face-to-face talk. Communications between Essen and the unoccupied areas are badly interrupted.

GIRL TELLS ABOUT LEAP

TESTIFIES SHE HOPPED FROM A SPEEDING AUTOMOBILE.

Her Mother's Effort to Recover $2,000 Damages From Jess McMichael and Others Begun in District Court.

Trial of the suit of Ella Daffer, seventeen years old, thru her mother, Mrs. Sophia Daffer, against Jess McMichael, his son Cleo McMichael and two other boys, for damages alleged to have been sustained in a leap by Miss Daffer from the McMichael auto near Pleasant Dale last May, was begun in District Judge Clements' court Tuesday morning before a jury. The plaintiff asks $2,000 damages.

The suit was originally filed against Jess McMichael, Cleo McMichael, Lawrence Headrick and William Meyers. It was alleged in the testimony of the plintiff that Sunday, May 14, 1922, she was asked by the defendants to enter the auto they were driving, and told they would take her home. She testified that instead of taking her home te driver started the auto in a different direction, and that she leaped from the moving auto to avoid being taken she knew not where. Immediately upon striking the ground by the auto of the defendants, she was struck by another passing auto and severely shaken up and bruised.

The girl alleged that Jess McMichael is the father of Cleo McMichael, and brought him in as a defendant on the allegation that the son was driving the auto thru his permission.

The defense attorney stated that Cleo McMichael, Lawrence Headrick, William Meyers, Laurel Ickes and Carolyn Wyman were in the auto, and that the driver had started to merely take Miss Daffer for a ride from a church in Pleasant Dale, where she lives, toward Emerald, then back immediately to her home.

Miss Daffer testified that on a previous ride with the same group one of the boys had attempted to put his arms around her.

The defense is to the effect that Miss Daffer was told as a joke that he mother had seen her enter the car, and that she gave no warning before she leaped, and did not ask the driver to stop.

NOT WEAKEN STATE LAW

PRESIDENT RILEY DISCUSSES PROPOSED BANK MEASURES.

Bills Leave All Control Where It Is Now and Provide Safeguards Necessary for Guaranty Deposit Fund.

In an interview Tuesday Dan J. Riley of Dawson, president of the Nebraska Bankers association, said that he had been asked by many persons to state the attitude of the state bankers towards the bills in the legislature relating to further safeguards for the deposit guaranty fund, and he complies in order that there be no misunderstanding.

"Twice within the past twelve months, by unanimous vote the state bankers have gone on record favoring no change in the present guaranty law which will in any wise diminish the rights of any depositors in any failed bank to collect immediately the amount of his deposit. This, in spite of the fact that state banks have, within the past two years, been compelled to pay into the guaranty fund for each year, sums ranging from 10 to 25 per cent of their capital stock, making a total of approximately eight million dollars. These assessments have taken not only the profits of state banks but have eaten deeply into the surplus and capital stock. To date fifty-three banks have failed entailing total drafts on the guaranty fund of about eight million dollars. It is apparent therefore, that some measure, or measures, must be taken to check or reduce the number of bank failures in Nebraska, and correspondingly lessen the loss to the going banks.

"To this end, the legislative committee, after careful analysis of the failures which have occurred during the past two years, and a study of the guaranty fund conditions in other states, has evolved the legislation contained in senate file 105 and house roll 272.

The proposed bill does not weaken or impair in any degree the state control and supervision of banks. Its purpose is to supplement the present state supervision, by the creation of a guaranty fund commission, consisting of nine executive officers of state banks, selected by the banks themselves — due precaution being taken to make their selection truly representative of the banks of the state. The secretary of the banking department shall be a member of the commission and its chairman.

This commission may employ special examiners who shall have power to examine state banks which, in the judgment of the commission, require special audits. The commission also shall have access to the records of the banking department relating to the examination of banks. The state retains every right of supervision which it now has, and it alone retains power to pass upon the applications for charters, to issue or revoke licenses for bank officials, and to close a bank if such procedure shall be necessary.

The commission may take over and administer existing receiverships, and may also supervise succeeding receiverships. There should be objection to this because the proceeds from the assets in failed banks are all returned to the guaranty fund in the hands of the bankers and it must be conceded that the going banks should be given an opportunity to realize as much as possible from this source.

The commission may, under certain restrictions with the consent and approval of the banking department, draw on the guaranty fund to prevent a bank failure. For example, if a bank is insolvent, part of the guaranty fund may be used to render the bank solvent without the expense of a receivership. However, in such cases, provision is made for safeguarding this action by forcing needed change in the management and control of the bank.

One of the provisions in this act creates an orderly statutory procedure for the issuance of receivers certificates. The state bankers, thru an organization of their own, have, in the past year, made it possible for receivers to borrow money on receivers certificates of approximately two and one-half million dollars. It should be clearly understood that these receivers certificates were issued by the receivers on an order of the district court and against cash in to guaranty fund. The purpose was to relieve the stress on banks and enable depositors to be paid promptly. The section permitting the investment of public funds in receivers' certificates is not essential and has been eliminated.

The state bankers of Nebraska believe that all of the provisions of this proposed legislation are fair and equitable. This bill leaves the general control and supervision of state banks of Nebraska with the state, where it now is, and where it should be. The bill seeks to supplement the present law to the extent only of giving representatives of going banks an opportunity to assist in the more effective regulation of all banks, and further, to assist in a better conservation of the guaranty fund. Under the present law, all state banks are made partners to the extent of insuring deposits. As they are made financially liable for all losses due to incompetency or dishonesty. Since the going banks have to pay the bills they should have some voice in determining the manner in which the business of their partner banks is conducted.

It is the opinion of the state bankers in Nebraska that if this bill is enacted into a law, it will be possible to stop further closing of banks, with a tremendous saving to the guaranty fund. It will eliminate unnecessary expense in conducting receiverships.

From beginning to end, the law contains not a single line or letter which in any manner abridges or changes the rights or security of depositors. There is no power hitherto enjoyed by the state banking department which is taken from it or weakened, and no derogative invoked. The proposed law gives promise of bringing to the banking fraternity better and more rigid examinations. It will foster sound banking practices. Its sole purpose is the prevention of bank failures, the conservation of resources of failed banks and the continuance of prompt payment to all depositors.

INDIAN PRINCE A SUICIDE

Sensational Death to Chief Gabriel Whitehorse Hatting When White Woman Rejects Him.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Unrequitted love for Mrs. Norma Pearl Moore Smith, twenty-seven, soda fountain cashier, caused Chief Gabriel Whitehorse Hatting, thirty-nine, Cherokee Indian, to shoot himself to death at her feet in Bloomingdale's department store here last night, police declared today.

Flourishing a revolver and crying "I love her—I love her," Whitehorse, who came here from Oklahoma and New Mexico, fired three shots, starting a panic among the 300 women shoppers. Two bullets went wild and the third killed him instantly.

Mrs. Smith, who declared she had been separated from her husband, admitted, police said, that she had exchanged love notes with Whitehorse, addressing him as "my Indian prince;" he called her "my Indian moon." She asserted she failed to realize he was serious and carried on the affair "just for fun."

"I am Chief Whitehorse of the Cherokee Indian tribe of Oklahoma," read a scrawled note found on the Indian's body.

"Bury me with Buffalo Bill. I was a member of his gang. The girls in the store are kidding me. How wild can I get? I am as wild as any fighting wildcat."

Letters found in the clothes of the Indian, some of them signed "Miss Pearl Moore and Norma Smith," bore such salutations as "Dearest Rain-in-the-face," "Sitting Bull," "My Indian Prince" and "My Papa." One of those that reiterated passionate love ended "Take me away out west and make me as wild as you are."

"I was only kidding him," Mrs. Smith told police.

Included in Whitehorse's effects were also rambling notes on his philosophy of life. One passage said:

"Man was made to care for woman. Woman was made to drink bum booze and raise the devil. Next to Japanese—next to everybody—nothing. I love—you bet."

MOVIES HELP U. S. TRADE

Educated Chinese in Silk Reeling, Resulting in Three-Fold Increase in Production.

PHILADELPHIA Feb. 6.—One of the greatest vehicles which the United States can use and is using to gain precedence in the foreign trade-field of China is the motion picture, according to Julean Arnold, commercial attache of the U. S. legation at Shaughai, China, now in the United States.

"China has a potential capacity for foreign trade of more than $50,000,000,000 yearly, and America, while most highly regarded by the Chinese, must go into that country with its wealth and obtain the inside track on the tremendous enterprise now opening in China," Arnold said.

Thru the motion pictures America was able to save its vast silk industry and this medium also completely changed the method of silk reeling in China that had been in vogue since the year 2852 B C, Arnold affirmed.

"Against the advise of many who believed the Chinese unchangeable, motion pictures of American silk weaving methods, designed to show the need of new methods by the Chinese, and with the titles printed in the various Chinese dialects, were prepared and sent into the great silk growing districts about Canton.

"The Chinese were so wildly excited that they jammed the halls where these pictures were to be shown and stayed all day and night, refusing to leave until the lights were turned out on them. Chinese silk weavers came from all over the country.

"The effect was immediate. In two years 25 per cent of the silkgrowers had adopted the American method of silk reeling and now the whole Chinese industry has done so, and it is producing for American use three times as much silk as before."

American melo-dramatic moving pictures should be kept out of China, however, according to Arnold, for some of the Chinese gain a wrong impression of customs and morals from the thrillers.

He cited an instance where a prominent Chinese woman changed her plans about sending her daughter to an American college, because she did not approve of our methods of throwing women down sewers, tossing them out of windows, tying them to railroad tracks and doing other terrible things, portrayed in the pictures.

The United States department of commerce is now preparing to show American industrial motion pictures all over China for propaganda purposes.

THE CROSSING COP

WHY TEAPOT DOME WAS NAMED

Biggest Perfectly Formed Teapot in World, Is Answer.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—People give strange names to things, including their own children. Perhaps you have wondered about the Teapot Dome oil leases you have read about. There is nothing strange about the name, for the biggest perfectly formed teapot in the world is the answer, according to a bulletin of the American nature association.

The next time you are out that way you will find the teapot on Green river in Wyoming. It is more than 100 feet high and 160 feet in diameter. The pot has a spout and it looks as if it were boiling over, but that is just cold lava. However, its liquid contents were hot ter than any tea that ever boiled. The teapot is a rock one, and its upper forty feet is lava, which was at one time a molten, liquid, white-hot stream so that it can be truthfully said that the "tea" in this pot once boiled with great activity.

The Teapot is sandstone, evenly bended and stratified, and it is many million years older than the volcanic capping. How was it formed? It was evidently deposited by the tides and currents of water running over it. In fact it was at one time the bottom of the ocean. Now, the Green river is one of the tributaries of the great Colorado river and in Wyoming, it is thousands of feet—four to five thousand—above the Colorado where the latter empties into the gulf of California—in other words above present sea level. To think then that these sandstone layers at Teapot Rock were once the floor of the primal ocean—is one of the stupefying evidences of the forces of Nature.

WOULD SAVE U. S. TIMBER

HARDING ENDORSES CONSERVATION OF FORESTS.

Appeals for Larger Cooperation Between Federal Government, State Authorities and Private Owners of Timber.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—President Harding today gave his open support to a policy of strict conservation of America's dwindling forest reserves.

In a letter to Representative Clark of New York the president appealed "for a larger cooperation between the federal government, the state authorities and the private owners of timber land for a national conservation policy to protect and conserve the fast dwindling forest areas of the country."

The president, in his letter, virtually aligned himself with the forces backing Secretary of Agriculture Wallace in his fight to prevent the transfer of the forestry to Secretary Falls' department of interior.

The strict conservationists have been backing Wallace, and those favoring rapid private development of government resources have been backing Fall.

The president endorsed a bill giving the secertary of agriculture board powers to conserve the timber reserves.

The federal government has made fine progress in its scheme or forester reserve, development of methods of forest protection against fire and insect and plant pests, in promoting reforestation and methods of timber conservation, and in its research looking toward improved methods of timber utilization," the president said. "Some of the states have formulated state plans along the same general lines and of recent years especially there has been a steadily growing interest on the part of private owners of forest lands. I am very glad, therefore, that the committee on agriculture feels that we have come to a time when definite provision should be made for larger cooperation between the federal government, the states and the private owners, with a view to working out a national policy covering the growth, protection, conservation and use of timber.

"When we remember that substantially one-fourth of the national area is forest land or potential forest land of little or no value save for timber production, the need of such policy becomes apparent. Already we have consumed or destroyed 60 per cent of our original timber wealth, and we are now using timber at a rate four times as fast as we are growing it. Millions of acres which were once covered with fine forests and which are suitable only for the growing of timber are now entirely barren. Prosperous communities built up while these virgin forests were being harvested have disappeared, transportation lines have been torn up and social and industrial decay has followed. The growing of timber is the most practical use to which these lands be put, and population and industry of these regions may be restored only by restoring the forests. To this end both federal and state governments may well lend every proper encouragement.

"As we have consumed our forest growth nearest to the centers of population and industry it has become necessary to ship the timber needed for constantly increasing distances at steadily growing transportation costs and inconvenience and with consequent increases in the prices of lumber. This has added to our difficulty in meeting the housing problem and is bound to mean lower standards of housing and less adequate farm improvements. These are vital matters, striking directly at our sources of national strength. Regrowth of our forests on cutover land which are most suitable for that purpose in the more populace portions of the United States is therefore highly desirable."

LUDENDORFF DRIVEN OUT BY AUSTRIANS

Workers Halt Train of Former Military Hero and Order Him to Return to Germany at Once.

MUNICH, Feb. 6.—General Ludendorff, military hero of the central powers in the great war, was driven from Austria today by workers.

The former quartermaster general is returning to his villa in Munich valley, after a hostile demonstration at Klagenfurt.

Ludendorff had been staying at a hotel in the Austrian city when the workers gathered outside, shouting: "Bloodhound." "Germany's grave digger."

The general attempted to proceed to Vienna, but the workmen halted his train and discovered the erstwhile commander hiding in a lavatory. They ordered him to return to Germany at once.

RENT vs. LIGHT

The rent of your store is based on the potential business of the site it occupies. The appearance of your store—its lighting inside and out—is a big factor in determining the amount of business you do. The cost of lighting your store is a very small item compared with your rent. Is it not poor judgment to pay a big rent and then lessen the volume of business you do by inadequate or inefficient lighting?

Without cost to you we shall be glad to advise you on the improvement of your lighting system.

RISK LIVES FOR VICTIMS

WICHITA FIREMEN HOPE TO FIND SOME OF MISSING.

Twenty Lost in Blaze Which Destroyed Apartment—Three Charred Bodies Taken From the Ruins.

WICHITA, Kas., Feb. 6.—Firemen risked their lives time and again, beneath tottering walls, today, in the hope of finding bodies of some of twenty persons missing as a result of a fire yesterday which destroyed an apartment building here.

Three charred bodies had been taken from the debris today and eight persons, seriously burned were in hospitals.

The bodies of a Mrs. Long and her son may be reached early today after which firemen planned a detailed search of the ruins.

The fire broke out early yesterday morning and when discovered had wrapped the building in smoke and flames. Tenants were awakened to find the stairways burning and ordinary escape impossible.

Many clung to fire escapes and window ledges in flimsy attire until firemen arrived and rescued them with ladders. A number slid down ropes to safety but were seriously scorched.

The cause of the fire has not been determined.

REVIVE COLONIAL SPIRIT

Alexandria, Va., to Celebrate Washington's Birthday by Immense Parade.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Feb. 6.—Alexandria is preparing to revive the spirit of colonial Virginia in giving one of the biggest parades in her history on Washington's birthday this year. This city has been chosen on account of the close relation of its history and that of "The Father of His Country."

All civic organizations of this quaint old city will participate in the parade, beside thousands who will come from all over the nation and the world. Military bands, civic bands and military companies will come from the many camps immediately surrounding the city and Washington. Governor E. Lee Trinkle, chief executive of the old dominion, will head the parade, accompanied by his guard of honor, a picked company of the famous Richmond light infantry blues.

The parade will follow the course of the old streets over which George Washington traveled daily on his way to and from his office. It will pass beneath the shadow of Shooter's Hill upon which a national memorial is being built in his honor by his brothers in Masonry. More than 2,000,000 Masons of America have contributed to the fund for the building of this memorial upon the hill that was originally chosen as the site for the capitol of the nation. This plan, however, was abandoned upon Washington's objection, which was based upon the fact that he owned the land.

Christ church is another of the historic points along the line of the parade. It was in this church Washington worshipped and served as a vestryman.

Alexandria has been chosen because it is mid-way between Washington and Mt. Vernon, it is just half way between a nation's capital and a nation's shrine. Many times George Washington drilled his little companies of soldiers on the cobblestoned streets.

Alexandria is also distinguished as being the home of the oldest daily newspaper in America. The Alexandria Gazette was established in 1784 and is just now starting its 138th year.

Tax Hospital on Alcohol.

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., Feb. 6.—United States Marshal Kinsler has brought suit in the federal court, Grand Island division, against the Coolidge hospital and sanitarium at Palmer, Neb., for $284.24, taxes alleged to be due because of the withdrawal, on the hospital's permit, of sixty-four gallons of alcohol from a warehouse and used for other purposes than those authorized in the permit. An eastern bonding company is joined in the defense with the owner of the hospital.

Mrs. Anna Kostlan Dies.

FREMONT, Neb., Feb. 6.—Mrs. Anna Kostlan, wife of Prof. S. A. Kostlan, former physical director at the University of Nebraska and the Fremont public schools, died after several weeks' illness. Mrs. Kostlan was born in Germany in 1866, and came to Fremont in 1890 with her husband. She is survived by her husband and one son, Alvin.

THE UNCONSCIOUS SINNER

CHAPTER LIV.

Carey's Return.

Carey returned, to the cabin in the late afternoon after tramping all day thru the surrounding hills. The first thing that he noticed as he began the ascent to the cabin was the desolateness of the house. The door was closed, and the whole place seemed strangely deserted. The loneliness of it stabbed thru his consciousness like a knife thrust, and a queer feeling of premonition swept over him.

He quickened his steps, reached the door, hesitated a moment, as tho in fear of what he might find on the other side of it, and then with a deliberate movement pushed it open and went in.

Outside it was still light, but the living room was dark and for a moment Carey could see nothing.

He strode over to the table, fumbled for the matches and lighted a lamp, and as he did so his eyes fell on an envelope placed just beneath the lamp. It was addressed to him, and in spite of himself Carey's strong fingers trembled as he tore it open and scanned the few brief lines. For a long moment after he had read the note he stood there motionless, and then with a muttered ejaculation he wheeled around, and his heart leaped as his eyes fell on the couch.

Cleo was still sleeping the sleep of utter exhaustion. She lay on her back with one arm flung across her breast, the other limp and inert by her side. As Carey's eyes devoured her, something stronger than his insatiable love for her, that feeling that he had been fighting all day, leaped into his heart. He could not account for it, but for the moment he felt like an intruder. It was tho he were carelessly treading on holy ground, as tho he had no right at all to be here, and the feeling brought a stinging sensation to his eyelids, and made him strangely humble.

Softly he strode over to the couch and stood for a moment looking down at the sleeping face. Then very cautiously he stooped down, slipped his strong arms under Cleo's slim body, cradled her against his breast as if she had been a baby and sat down on the couch to wait for her to awaken. He hardly breathed as he sat there holding her, and the wonder of it was that she slept on as if she had been drugged. The limplight flickered in the room and thru the open window came the drowsy sound of crickets. It was all very peaceful and homelike save that in the heart of the man tumult raged.

He was wondering what would happen when she roused to consciousness in his arms. Would she start away from him in terror? What would she say when she discovered that Dick had gone away and left them alone together? Good old Dick! And Carey's throat suddenly tightened.

At this moment Cleo stirred in his arms. She turned her head restlessly from side to side on his shoudler, and then her lashes fluttered and she opened her eyes. For a long moment she lay there looking up at him, and suddenly Carey felt that the silence was more than he could bear.

He lowered her to the pillow and, dropping on his knees by the couch, buried his head against her. He felt that he must kneel to her, that the privilege of holding her in his arms just as tho they had always been was not for him. And then suddenly close in spirit, as tho no barriers of his own making had ever existed between them, Cleo began to speak.

"I dreamed that Dick went away and left us alone together, and I fell asleep in your arms." Her voice was deliciously drowsy, adorably intimate, and Carey felt his pulses leap and the hot blood go coursing thru his veins. But the next moment his heart sank. She was still half asleep, she wasn't aware of what she was saying.

"Cleo," he whispered, "I love you! I've held you in my arms while you slept, but I had no right to do that, not after the way I've treated you. But, Cleo, if you still care, if you'll give me the right to make it all up to you——" his voice broke off, but then went on again almost in desperation, "Cleo, are you awake or are you still dreaming?"

"I'm awake," went on the soft voice, with an intonation in it that was maddeningly sweet. "I've been awake for a long time!"

Carey waited for nothing more. In an instant he had her crushed against his breast, but this time her arms were tight about his neck, and her face, like a thirsty flower, was upturned to his kisses.

(The End.)

HAMMER SLAYER IS FACING DEPORTATION

Fate of Clara Phillips Depends on Delivery of "Little Phil" Alquin to American Authorities.

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 6.—The fate of Clara Phillips, hammer murderess, now in hiding somewhere in the state of Chihuahua, hangs on the delivery of "Little Phil" Alquin, dope ring leader and alleged slayer of Detective Sergeant John J. Fitzgerald, into the hands of American authorities, it was freely predicted here today.

"Little Phil" is now reported aboard a Mexican Petroleum company tanker, due to arrive in Galveston some time today.

Galveston police will be advised by wireless and will meet the vessel with a tug and remove the deported gunman under strong guard if he is aboard.

He will then be rushed to Los Angeles to face the murder charge.

Soon after "Little Phil" is landed there, the doors of the Los Angeles jail will swing open and Herbert and Fernando Uribe, charged with possession of a stolen automobile, will walk out, freed of the charge.

It has been the promise of Chief of Police Oaks of Los Angeles, made three months ago to the boys' father, Dr. J. R. Uribe, sanitary inspector of Juarez and to Herbert's beautiful wife, Catherine, that should "Little Phil" be put across the border in any way, whether officially by deportation or unofficially by "strong arming" the two boys would be freed unconditionally, and Catherine's $10,000 worth of diamonds left as bail, with California authorities, returned to her.

Those on the "inside" here declare that, barring slips in present plans, this will also be the signal for Clara's arrest.

Official investigators, government agents, police, soldiers of fortune and others gathered here, interested in the "tiger woman" hunt, become more convinced daily that the iron-willed little doctor sitting in his room in the Libertad hospital, holds the key to the situation.

The firmly believe that he made no idle boast when he declared that he has Clara under surveillance at the present time and that he will deliver her, as well as Alquin "to show the Americans I keep my word."

He is frankly interested in one thing only—the release of his boys. He is taking no chances on that. He is keeping Clara available for trading, they say, because he wants to have an ace up his sleeve in case anything should happen to Alquin—for Chief Oaks will not release the boys until the jail doors clang on Alquin.

FIND STATUES OF PHARAOH

Two Life-Size Likenesses of King Tut-Ankh-Amen and Chariot Uncovered.

LUXOR, Egypt, Feb. 6.—Two life size statues of King Tut-Ankh-Amen, a chariot and a few odds and ends of relics were all that remained today in the outer chamber of the pharoah's tomb. These removed, Lord Carnavon and his assistants will start thru the pinkish, walled-up doorway, behind which the mummy of the ruler is believed to lie.

Probably within a week, those in charge of the excavation intimate, the last barrier that has protected the king's bier for 3,500 years will be broken down, and the last of the missing pharaohs brought out into the sunlight.

A life size model of Tut-Ankh-Amen, believed to have been for use by his tailors, and a throne in the back of which a portrait of the pharaoh and his bride is worked in gold plating and glass, are among the latest relics removed from the outer chamber. Innumerable visitors, some of royal rank, still impede work of the excavators.

THIS ONE EXTRA PROCESS GIVES A DELIGHTFUL FLAVOR

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry
For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Easily and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes but a moment to prepare, and really there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2¼ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

TELLEGEN CASE POSTPONED

Attorney for Actor Sued by Geraldine Farrar for Divorce Objects to Open Hearing.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Hearing in the divorce action brought by Geraldine Farrar against Lou Tellegen was postponed until tomorrow.

Tellegen's attorney objected strenuously to an open hearing.

DENVER, Feb. 6.—"Let the lady have her divorce," was tse way Lou Tellegen, who is here today, dismissed the subject of Geraldine Farrar's petition for a divorce, now being heard in the New York courts.

"If the lady desires it, I hope she may have it within twenty-fur hours."

Tellegen said his wife had "plenty of evidence" to obtain her freedom.

MOTHER! MOVE CHILD'S BOWELS
"California Fig Syrup" is Child's Best Laxative

Even if cross, feverish, bilious, constipated or full of cold, children love the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." A teaspoonful never fails to clean the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the souring food and nasty bile out of the stomach and bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Adverisement.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Why Does Lillian Need to Warn Madge Cryptically?

IT was with a feeling of escape from something distinctly unpleasant that after breakfast I dressed for the street, and, leaving Claire Foster curled up on the couch in the living-room, departed on my shopping expedition.

"I'll try to be back in time to get luncheon," I said, as I left.

"As my lunch always consists of one cup of tea, one piece of dry toast and an orange or an apple, I believe I might manage to get it myself," she drawled. "I'll tell you a deadly secret. There's a tendency in our family to F-A-T—spelled with capitals, and I'm laying a preliminary barrage. So don't hurry back."

"I'll take the day off, then," I returned lightly, as I went out of the door. I was indeed like a kitchen maid temporarily released from servitude. I told myself bitterly as I made my way first of all to the nearest drug store where I found a long-distance telephone booth.

There is no telephone at the farmhouse, but I knew that genial Farmer Briggs would be only too glad to deliver a message to Lillian. I looked at my wrist watch, noted the hour as 10 o'clock, asked Mr. Briggs to have Lillian at his home at eleven, spent the interval in rambling through quaint historic Jefferson Market, with its rows of stalls from which one can select almost any kind of food in the world. I made a few necessary purchases, carried them back to the building, hunting up the janitor, tipped him, and gave them to him for delivery. I did not care for either the three-flight climb or the prospect of another colloquy with Claire Foster.

At eleven, exactly, I heard Lillian's welcome voice. Characteristically, she betrayed no emotion whatever in her words, but I, who know her every intonation, caught the intense relief which was hers at hearing from me.

"I'll Remember—Good-by."

"Couldn't stand it another minute without being sure that Junior hadn't stubbed his toe," she gibed, patently for the benefit of Mr. Briggs. "Well! I am happy to assure you that he has all his members intact, as had the rest of the family five minutes ago. Is everything jake with you? When are you coming home?"

"Yes, to the first question," I replied. "The second depends upon our physician friend. But, first let me give you the address and telephone number where we are. I am not 'phoning from there, but you could get us there in an emergency."

"Go ahead," she said, and I knew that she had pencil and paper ready for just such information. I guessed that she would not wish to speak Dr. Pettit's name over the telephone, so when I had given her our mail and telephone address, I spoke swiftly succinctly.

"I'll write you today a full account of our adventures with our friend. They were hectic, I can assure you. And he is still on the war path. I am not coming home until he has quieted down. Is he there yet?"

"Not yet," Lillian replied laconically. "I'll find out for you and wire or 'phone you."

"When you're sure it's safe?"

"Yes."

"All right. Kiss Junior and Marion for me, won't you?"

"I'll do that little thing," she said blithely. "Don't take any bad money while you're in the city. Good-by."

I started at the time-worn jest, for I recognized it distinctly as one of the code expressions used between us. So bromidical an expression would never have been used by Lillian ordinarily, but she recognized its value in cloaking a message such as she was now giving to me. For, interpreting the words in our secret code, I heard in it the distinct warning, "Look out for danger. Don't forget for a single second."

"I'll remember," I promised hastily. "Good-by."

A Chance Meeting.

The warning, coming upon the heels of that uttered by Harry Underwood, upset me for a few minutes. I seemed to see a menace in every unfamiliar face, every grouping of people at all out of the ordinary.

Then my common sense asserted itself, and I told myself that no one knew my present whereabouts in New York, and that, anyway, a crowded city street was the safest possible place for me. Accordingly I went about my quest for the etched glass to replace the one belonging to Mrs. Bliss with an interest that banished all fears from my mind.

It was a long search, but by sheer good luck I came across three of the glasses in the window of a second-hand shop, and promptly bought them all in order to insure my absent hostess against further possible loss. Then I went to a department store, attracted by an advertisement of adorable suits for small boys.

The suits proved as attractive as the advertisement, and I revelled in purchasing a number for my small boy, visualizing him in them. A chance comment upon the time from a customer next to me brought me to the realization that I had had no lunch, and I made my way to the pretty grill room of the store.

A courteous waitress piloted me to a seat, and then I heard a little gasp of amazement, and little Mrs. Durkee fluttered over to my table.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT A Silver-Plate Boy

Winifred Black

WELL, Senator," said the tall boy, with the hair that stood straight up on his head, "are you going right through with us?"

And he clapped the Senator on the shoulder and sat down in the dining-car with a gay swing that seemed to say: "I'm me! Who are you?"

The Senator winced, frowned, then when he saw the youth of the boy he smiled and thought better of it.

"Yes," he said, "I'm going through."

"Washington, I suppose," said the boy. "That's where you senators go, isn't it? I used to fly down in Washington; I was there, training aviators."

The Senator turned and looked at the boy with a sudden access of interest.

You Couldn't Forget Him

"In the service?" he asked.

"Yep," said the boy. "I went over with the Canadians first and then when we got in I jazzed back and hopped in and began to shinny on our own side, got bumped three times, knocked down out of the air by Fritz. Oh, yes, I saw service, all right, all right!

"Doing exhibition stunts now, country fairs, you know, and that sort of thing. Getting too late in the year for that, so I am going home to fuss around a little with the old folks till spring comes. I've got a dandy little car—a racer. I do a little racing, too, on the side. I think I'll go down to Florida and burn up the gasoline in one of those races at the big beaches—some pep—be-lie-e-ve me!"

The boy didn't take any pains to lower his voice and the whole car sat up and listened.

An elderly man with a look of importance and some dignity edged himself into the seat opposite the Senator and boy.

"Hello, Buddy!" said the boy, leaning across the table with the air of one who beholds with joy a long-lost bosom friend. "Didn't I see you back in the smoker?"

The important-looking man gave a wry grin.

"Oh, well—maybe," he said grudgingly.

"Sure I did!" whooped the tall boy. "We were bettin' about you, the porter and I, after you left. He said you were a banker, but I got you for a wholesale dry goods. How about it—what's your line?"

The man of importance scowled and pretended not to hear.

The boy persisted.

"What do you do for a living, Buddy?" he said.

"Mostly," snapped the important-looking man, "I mind my own business."

"Whew!" whistled the boy. "Slapped right on the wrist! What do you know about that?"

The rest of us didn't forget him—he wouldn't let us! He circulated up and down the train telling his adventures to all who would listen—familiar, bragging, egotistical and yet something lovable about him, too. Late in the afternoon he sat with me.

And Then He Told the Reason

"Ever see a man with a silver plate in his head?" he said. "I'm one—look, here it is." And before I could shrink away I saw, and—I suddenly understood and was ashamed of my quick, easy judgment of him.

This boy had risked his life a thousand times with light-hearted courage, taken his punishment and come back to us who sat in safety and in peace because of him and the like of him, and then we laughed at him and were bored by him because he had been hurt and was not quite the same and never would be again.

The little story somehow spread through the train and it was wonderful and very heartening to see the change in the attitude toward him.

The Senator and the man of importance asked him to dinner. I shall never think as harshly of that man of importance again as I have thought in the years past. As for the Senator, he may not be much of a statesman, but somewhere beside that somewhat-grandiloquent pose of his there is a real heart.

The tall boy who used to be an aviator in the service and I found that out that cold day riding through the Dakotas in the blinding snow.

I am never going to judge anyone too quickly again—but dear me, how many times I have made that resolution and how many times I have broken it.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 7.

This promises to be a day of important events, according to the rulings of the dominant planets. With Uranus strong both by lunar and mutual direction, there is the augury of radical departures and stirring activities, possibly of a sudden and unpremeditated nature. The tendency may be to the bold and adventurous, with the disposition to stop at nothing. This may be profitable, provided that the money or substance be not handled in a foolhardy manner, since speculation, lending money and standing security may be hazardous.

Those whose birthday it is have the forecast of an unusually active year, with possibly radical changes of an abrupt nature. These may be profitable if the money be not subjected to risk of any nature. Social and domestic activity is also presaged. A child born on this day will be active, energetic, adventurous, independent, kind and generous, but may be restless unless it is carefully trained.

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

She Describes a Charming, Long-Waisted Evening Frock of Bronze Lace.

PAM and I went to a fashion show last night. It was given for charity, and Madame had some tickets which she gave us.

"Girls, I don't know whether you'll see much that's new, but I understand there are to be a few very interesting French imports," she told us.

That was enough to arouse our interest, and the rising of the curtain found us waiting.

"They are to be worn by young debutantes," Pam whispered. "It will be fun to see so many of Madame's clients whom we know."

The music started, and some very lovely girls promenaded out in some very lovely gowns.

"They should have come to us to learn the proper manikin's walk," I suggested to Pam.

"Yes, then they'd lack nothing to be professional," she agreed. "Most of them have beautiful slim figures for showing off gowns."

"Here comes one of the featured French frocks," said Pam, referring to her program, and nodding toward the girl who was just emerging into the ring or spotlight.

"I should have known at a glance in her direction," I declared.

"That's glorious bronze lace," Pam said, as the electric light caught the rich glints in the lace.

"Yes," I agreed. "And it's evidently made by one of the houses that favor the long waistline."

"Yes, that waistline drops very low indeed," I agreed with her.

"How do you like the two-tiered skirt?" Pam asked.

"I like it very much," I told her.

"I've seen it on several of the smartest new gowns," Pam said.

"And I've also seen that tendency to draw the skirt up in one place, giving the uneven hemline," I added.

"That's somewhat the effect of those new draped-at-the-front skirts," Pam said. "Only most of Madame's are drawn up directly at the front."

"That's a charming bronze buckle that holds those drapes up at the side," I remarked.

"And notice how well she carries out the accessories," Pam pointed out.

"She has on stunning slippers, brocaded in different colors," I agreed. "The bronzes and browns blend with the lace most charmingly."

"It's queer about the long waistline," Pam remarked. "Some French houses are doing their best to get the waistlines back to normal, while others are dropping it as close about the knees as they can."

"If women will only consider individual figures, and not try to wear either kind simply because it's smart, all will be well," Pam added wisely as the curtain fell.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE.

We are three girls, 20 years of age, and have been keeping company with three young men two years our senior for ten months.

Now, we have just learned that one of these young men is engaged to another girl. We have spoken to him about it, and he said it was the truth, but he does not love her, and hates to tell her, but would do so for the sake of the girl he is with at the present time.

The young men want us to elope with them, but we are in doubt, as our parents would rather have us married at home. What shall we do?

TWO BRUNETTES AND A BLONDE.

TWO BRUNETTES AND A BLONDE: If the young man does the honorable thing he will tell his fiancee he does not love her. But the other girl should have nothing to do with him until he is free.

What are you thinking of, girls, when you consider such an undignified thing as eloping when you can be married at home with those you love around you?

The funny-faced creature had seen her and had given chase. She, like her mate, Willy, took to the topmost limb on the highest tree.

There sat Mrs. Owl blinking at the light. She had heard the noise and had ventured out to see what it was about. She smiled drowsily as Mrs. Biddy Hawk, out of breath with her flight settled on the limb.

"What's the rush?" she asked. "Had such a good breakfast that it has made you overly limber?"

"Breakfast," screamed Mrs. Biddy Hawk. "I'm lucky to get off with my life! What in the world is that funny-faced thing that gets after us when we hawks try to catch a chicken? My, but it's a savage thing. I've never seen anything like it before in all my life. What is it, anyway?"

"What, you a hawk, and don't know what that funny-faced thing is?" laughed Mrs. Owl. "Why, you'll find a good many of them scattered over here in Guiana. They call them Anhimias, whatever that means. Haven't you ever seen one before?"

Mrs. Hawk shook her head and hid behind the trunk of the tree as the queer bird in question flew by. He was an ugly-looking fellow with a long beak. Just above his eyes there ran out a long, sharp horn or hook that made the shivers run up and down Mrs. Biddy Hawk's back, as she thought how close he had been to her back.

"I'm glad he didn't get close enough to strike me," Mrs. Biddy Hawk shuddered. "I don't know whether that horn is sharp or not. But I'm just as well satisfied not to find out. And you say he takes care of the flock?"

"Indeed he does," replied Mrs. Owl. "Every morning as I'm coming home to bed I find that anhimia driving the chickens out to the meadows, and every evening as I'm going out I see him driving them into the pen. He's as good, if not better, than a watch-dog any day."

"I'll say he is," laughed Mrs. Biddy Hawk, who by this time was feeling better. "I guess I'll go home now and tell Willy I'm sorry I spoke so crossly." And bidding Mrs. Owl good-by she sailed away.

The Willy Hawk family went without their breakfast that morning. That very afternoon they moved away to another part of the country where folks had never heard of such a thing as an anhimia.

HEROINES OF HISTORY

Significant Incidents in the Lives of Famous Women

By MARK STUYVESANT

A Glimpse Into the Life of Madame De Stael.

SURELY a woman who could inspire fear in the heart of the greatest soldier of all time was a heroine!

Mme. de Stael was exiled because Napoleon was afraid of her. She was too powerful, too brilliant, too clever.

Mme. de Stael was Germaine Necker, the daughter of the Necker who was minister of finance to Louis XVI. Her mother was of humble Swiss birth, but a woman of such charm that Gibbon—the great historian who wrote the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire"—wanted to marry her.

The daughter inherited her father's shrewdness, brilliancy of mind and her mother's feminine appeal.

So attractive was she that Gibbon showed evident signs of pursuing his love quest to the second generation. For he was in love with Germaine Necker. Of his first meeting with her he said:

"She was a splendid creature—only 17, but a woman grown, physically, mentally; not handsome, but dazzling, brilliant, emotional, sensitive, daring."

At 20 Germaine Necker married Baron de Stael-Holstein, the Swedish ambassador to France. It was a loveless but amiable match. Both acquired what they wished. Germaine Necker received a title, and De Stael secured money—for this girl's dowry was 2,000,000 francs.

After many years, without wrangling or publicity, the couple parted.

When the Revolution broke, Mme. de Stael rushed from absolute security in Switzerland to the terrors which held sway in her beloved home—Paris.

She was not afraid. She opened her salon, and there consulted and advised the leaders of the revolutionary movement. Talleyrand, Lafayette, Barras and Narbonne were her constant visitors.

She Reopened Her Salon.

It was with great sorrow that Mme. de Stael was finally forced to flee to England. She returned as quickly as possible. Immediately she reopened her salon.

But it was not for long. Napoleon saw with what authority she ruled. No one should have power but him.

Again this brilliant woman left her country. She traveled in Germany. While there she wrote a book called "Germany."

Napoleon, seizing upon this as disloyal, ordered every copy destroyed. But his real reason, it has been hinted, was because the authoress had neglected to mention the name of the Emperor of France.

However, her book was a great success in other countries and established her as a literary giant. She continued to write with great success. In fact, so prominent did Mme. de Stael become that she was hailed as "The High Priestess of Letters," "Minerva of Poetry" and "Sappho Returned."

The battle between Mme. de Stael and Napoleon ended only when Napoleon suffered what he had inflicted on her—exile.

Then the former queen of society returned to Paris. Triumphantly she reopened her salon, which was attended by the brains, wealth and nobility of the world.

But her reign was short. She died suddenly at the age of 51. Those 51 years were so brilliant that the name of Mme. de Stael stands alone in its special niche in the history of France.

How to Treat a Burn to Banish Pain and Danger

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Commissioner of Health, New York City
U. S. Senator-Elect from New York State

DR. COPELAND

JUST as there are more destructive fires in the winter time, there are more burns of human beings at this time of year. One of the common accidents of life is burning the body surface. Matches, hot stoves, sputtering lard, curling irons, firecrackers—there are innumerable ways of meeting with this uncomfortable experience.

The seriousness of a burn depends on its depth and the extent of the surface involved. The age of the patient and the part of the body damaged play a part. Very old persons and very young ones are more likely to suffer badly even from moderate burns.

Not only is the immediate outcome disagreeable, but also the secondary effects of a burn are sometimes exceedingly grave. Infection, due to carelessness in the management of the burn, or from accident, may result in pus formation and blood-poisoning.

If the burn is not extensive, the chief indication is the relief of pain. To this end the air should be excluded. Almost any local measure recommended for burns is intended to serve this purpose.

Various powders are used. Saleratus, or baking soda, flour, alum, bismuth, talcum powder, boracic acid—one of these substances may be sprinkled thickly over the burned surface.

If the hand has been burned it may be immersed in a vessel containing soda or saleratus solution.

Subacetate of aluminum is a good remedy to relieve the pain. Compresses are dipped in a 5 per cent. solution, and these are laid on the burned surface. They should be kept wet with the solution. Evaporation may be prevented by covering the compresses with a dry towel.

If the skin is unbroken, sweet oil, vaseline, lard or zinc oxide ointment may be applied. Such applications should not be used if there are ruptured blisters, deep burns or broken surfaces from any cause. Their use may be followed by infection of the wounded tissues and by pus formation.

When the surface is broken, picric acid may be employed. Gauze is wet with a 5 per cent. solution and applied to the burn. Cotton is placed over this, and the whole dressing is covered with a bandage.

There are various secret remedies alleged to have special virtues in the treatment and healing of burns. Most of them consist of paraffin with the addition of olive oil, eucalyptus and other substances. Some authorities contend that equal parts of mineral oil and hard paraffin are just as valuable. To be used they are heated till they run together.

All these paraffin remedies are applied by spraying with an atomizer. First, the skin is sprayed. Then cotton is thinly spread on the burned surface and this is sprayed. It will be seen that this covers and thoroughly protects the injured parts from the air.

If the patient suffers from shock, that is, if he is pale, cold, faint, sick at his stomach and very weak, he needs careful treatment. Put him to bed, keep his head low, cover him with blankets, surround him with hot water bottles, and send for the doctor.

Answers to Health Questions

J. E. F. Q—Will you please tell me what causes black specks before the eyes? I have been treated for indigestion, but I still have this trouble.

A—Constipation is a great factor in this condition, but it may be due to an eye condition. Correct the constipation if it is present and consult an eye specialist or attend an eye clinic for proper treatment. For particulars on the treatment of constipation, restate your question and enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

G. S. Q—I am a girl 22 years of age and am troubled with rapid beating of my heart. It keeps me awake at night and I am very nervous. I have been examined and was told that my heart is normal. What would you advise me to do?

A—If you have had your heart examined and it was found to be normal I see no reason for you to worry. The trouble is probably due to nervousness.

• • •

A CONSTANT READER. Q—Will you please tell me what I can do for gooseflesh on my arms?

A—If this condition is not due to exposure to the cold massage the parts with cold cream. Otherwise, keep your body well covered.

BIDDY HAWK GOES WITHOUT ANY BREAKFAST.

"I CAN'T see for the life of me why you couldn't get at least one chicken out of that large flock," growled Mrs. Biddy Hawk. "Here I've been working myself to death trying to get the place cleaned up so we could have a good meal. I certainly wouldn't have worked so hard if I hadn't thought I was going to get a good breakfast."

"I'm sorry," sighed her mate sadly. "I tried. But [illegible] nice that travels with the flock wouldn't let me—"

"What!" screamed Biddy Hawk wildly. "You were afraid of that 'funny face' as you call him? Any old time I'd let such a thing stop me from having a good square meal! I'll show you how it's done. No funny-faced thing like that will ever stop me." And away she flew toward the pen where the farmer's chickens were kept.

Mrs. Biddy Hawk spotted the chick she thought would taste the daintiest, and sailed down toward it. But she changed her mind before she was within reaching distance, and flew for her very life. The funny-faced creature had seen her and had given chase. She, like her mate, Willy, took to the topmost limb on the highest tree.

COUNTY VOTE AS TO AGENT

BILL ADVANCED ON ROLL CALL BY A CLOSE MARGIN.

House Acts Unanimously to Kill Bill Giving Power Companies Right of Way Rights of Railroads.

In committee of the whole Tuesday, the house advanced to third reading on roll call, H. R. 86, Strehlow bill providing that counties shall vote on appropriating funds for the support of county agents. The vote was 51 to 51. Under the present law appropriation for farm bureau support is based on petition. If 300 farmers or a number not less than one-half the total in the county, petition for such organization, it becomes mandatory upon the county board. This measure puts it up to the county as a whole to say what it wants.

H. R.147, one of the Barbour-O'Gara string carrying the requirement of a two-thirds vote to authorize bond issues, was advanced after an amendment to reduce to three-fifths was voted down 45 to 18. This bill provides that school districts having more than 150 pupils shall not issue bonds for school house construction unless authorized by a two-thirds vote.

The house put to sleep in committee a bill permitting power companies to acquire right of way in the same manner as railroads. The farmers voiced strenuous objection. They pictured a dozen or more lines over a quarter section. They urged that such power lines be confined to the highways. Not a voice was raised for the bill when the motion to indefinitely postpone was put. Other bills advanced to third reading:

H. R. 141, by Barbour and O'Gara—Repeals law providing that in counties of 7,000 population or less, entire county may be organized into one school district.

H. R. 266, by Tunne—Provides that school districts in cities of metropolitan class cannot borrow money except by authority of a two-thirds vote.

H. R. 188, by Ward—Corrects conflict in present law relative to approval of appeal bond. Sections now in conflict provide for approval by lower court and also by appellate court in same instance.

H. R. 260, by Broome—Provides that where husband or wife insane for period of three years, guardian may petition court for order of conveyance.

H. R. 197, by Ernest—Increases maximum levy for support of county high schools from eight mills on assessed value to three mills on actual value.

For the past two years, a bushel has been short forty-two one-hundredths of a cubic inch. The house intends to put it back. H. R. 269, providing that a bushel shall consist of 2,150.42 cubic inches, was advanced to third reading.

MORE ARBOR LODGE VOTES

Total Shows Two to One in Favor of Accepting the Morton Gift.

Votes continue to come in on the Arbor Lodge question. They are taking a slight turn toward the negative side, so that if the voting continues the 2 to 1 ratio in favor of the proposition may be destroyed.

At present the vote stands 397 for and 182 against.

A citizen at Bradshaw suggests that if Nebraska City wants the park, the town might make a tourist park of it and charge a small fee, thus making a beautiful summer resort self supporting. Albert H. Volker of Humboldt says if the idle rich want a playground let them pay for it. But the state should do everything possible to reduce the tax on land so the farmer will eventually be able to own a home without an encumbrance on it.

Peter Reinheimer of Rising City, who has lived in Nebraska fifty years, thinks that this is a time when we should be content with necessities only. He believes such a park at this time would be a sore thumb on the state's hand. He points out also that the trees have been planted out so long at Arbor Lodge that they are now dying out rapidly.

Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Lovell of College View, who have also lived in the state half a century, think that the state should by all means own Arbor Lodge, as the distance to it from Lincoln and many smaller towns makes a nice drive by automobile.

"FIRST LOVE"

The Story of a Childhood Romance that Struggled Against the Temptations of the New York Business World.
(Copyright.)

By Caroline Crawford

A Real Cowboy.

Jessie decided to humor her uncle from the west and even to pretend she had fallen in love with the cowboy he had selected as an ideal mate for her. She knew she could meet Peter downtown and manage to keep him away from the house during her uncle's short visit. But when she actually met the great six-footer she found it wasn't a very difficult role to feign.

His name was Wolfert Reed and that alone was enough to command attention.

"They call me 'Wolf' out West," he told her as they sat together in the living-room and he played with the tassel on her mother's favorite cushion in just the same annoying manner that Peter did. "I guess they make it 'Wolf' because I eat 'em alive." At this he burst out in a hearty laugh which seemed to shake the ceiling and actually did jar the crystals on the new lamp.

But he was so handsome!

She could hardly meet his flashing dark brown eyes and his chin was so square that it fairly outrivalled all the Dana Gibson young men she ever admired. And his hair! It was black and glossy and combed back in an ideal pompadour.

"And do you eat 'em alive?" she laughingly asked.

"There's a whole lot of bragging and bullying when you live in the West," he confessed, "but back of it all I'm a lamb."

They both laughed at this and Jessie was surprised to note that her own laugh was much louder and heartier than usual. There was something whole-hearted and invigorating about this big, strapping young man. She felt as if she had gone up in the mountains or off in the pine woods She wanted to be real and natural and forget all about etiquette and social customs which had been drilled into her since childhood.

"Haven't you ever noticed what an old bully your Uncle Bill is?" he asked, batting his handsome eyes. "He's the best friend I have in the world and I happen to know he thinks everything of you, but if you should disobey him he'd let it pass by quicker than your own father. And mind you, he's going to settle his whole estate on you too!"

Jessie smiled as the thought came to her that in time he would probably even forgive her for marrying Peter. This big, burly Western chap had given her a new light on her own uncle. But as she sat admiring him she wondered if, after all, Wolfert Reed wasn't a mighty fine chap and her uncle wasn't rather clever in selecting him for her. When she suddenly remembered that her uncle had told her this man had come openly to woo her. Had her uncle not intimated that he saw her picture at his ranch and then made the trip East especially to see her?

And now she wondered if he were pleased with her?

She looked at him, his eyes twinkled and they laughed.

It was the understanding laugh of youth. Anyway they were friends!

"Are there many interesting girls out West?" she asked.

"None at all," he flashed back. "Are there many interesting men East?"

"One," she frankly admitted.

"Let's hope the score will be changed before I go back West," he good-naturedly laughed and made an engagement to take her to the theater the following evening.

ago as a site for a junior high school building, but was later considered too small for the outdoor activities to be included. Seven of the twenty-four lots have already been sold. It is believed the school district will gain a few thousands thru the purchase in the end. If more lots are to be sold singly, only one house on a lot will be permitted, according to a motion made by Dr. E. W. Rowe and carried by vote.

Requests were presented from citizens in the Willard district asking permission to tap the water mains laid recently by the board at a cost of more than $4,000. The mains belong to the school district but by recent action of the city council are with the Lincoln city limits. M. L. Palmer was appointed to work out a system of charges for tapping which will return in time the cost of the mains to the district.

Reinsurance of the steam boilers of the city school was authorized. The cost for three years in the past was $915. This did not include the new boilers installed within three years, but did include proper inspection.

It was voted to ask the council for a parking ordinance to include the parking on J street in front of the high school, where a dangerous situation is created when street cars pass between two rows of parked cars.

The board approved the basis of final settlement with J. H. Bicknell, contractor, for the Elliott building, as estimated by E. E. Henkle, chairman of the committee in charge, and authorized payment immediately of $22,000 to Mr. Bicknell on his written acceptance of terms of settlement. A few hundreds would be kept out till the building is entirely out of the contractor's hands. The cost of the Elliott up to December 1, 1922, amounted to $393,059.56, including $37,000 paid for real estate, $10,070 to the general architect, $571 to the landscape architect, $250,050 to the general contractor, and $64,590 for plumbing, heating and ventilation. The remainder to be paid will bring the cose within $425,000.

Leave of absence was granted for one semester, without pay, to Frances McNabb, and the superintendent's recommendations for the following elections and resignations were adopted:

Elections—
Charlotte Kizer, half time art, high school, salary $50 per month.
Helen Tanner, one-fifth time music, high school, salary $18 per month.

BANKERS ARE INTERESTED

Senate Committee Plans to Hold Public Meetings Every Monday and Wednesday Night.

Chairman Bliss and other members of the banking committee of the senate held a preliminary meeting and discussed in a general way the bills that should receive first attention of the committee. A majority of the committee believe the most important measure before the committee is S. F. 105, a bill giving the state bankers association something to say about the enforcement of the bank guaranty law. This bill provides for the investment of state and city funds in certificates to be issued by receivers of failed banks. It also provides for the use of the guaranty fund to help banks about to fail. It is opposed by Governor Bryan as taking control away from the state, or from the governor as chief executive officer of the state.

The senate banking committee is also of the opinion that the bill reducing the legal maximum rate of interest on deposits from 5 to 4 per cent, and another bill making a reduction of 15 per cent in the loaning power of banks, ought to have much consideration.

Meetings of the senate committee will be held every Wednesday evening and Monday evening for some time for the purpose of hearing bankings on pending legislation.

The senate committee on revenue will hold a meeting Tuesday evening on S. F. 107, by Thielen, an income tax bill. This committee hold regular meetings every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon.

SAYS JUDGE WAS ARBITRARY

Attorney for Paul McCoy Insists He Should Have Been Granted Another Trial.

Paul McCoy, convicted in Lancaster county of holding up James Hand, tells the supreme court, in a typewritten brief filed Tuesday by his attorney that Judge Clements was guilty of an abuse of discretion when he refused to give him a new trial. He says that his conviction was due to the positive identification of him as the bandit by Hand, when he was on the witness stand. He produced two witnesses who operate a tailor shop, to show that he was there at the time Hand said the holdup happened, but Hand's identification overcame this alibi.

Since then Hand has made an affidavit in which he says that after investigation and reflection, he cannot positively swear that McCoy was the guilty man. All he would swear is that the man resembles McCoy. The latter's attorney insists that under this showing McCoy was entitled to a new trial, and that if Hand had testfied as he now looks at the matter of identification, McCoy would be acquited.

A typewritten brief was filed, it being averred that McCoy hasn't enough money to pay for the usual printed brief.

CHOCOLATE DROP IN ORGAN.

KINSTON, N. C., (By mail)—The mystery of the "Lost Chord" in the organ of the Church of the Disciples of Christ here has been solved. Electricians called in to diagnose the trouble that caused the organ to give forth such unearthly music, found a chocolate drop resting on the base chord.

TODAY I AM REAL WELL

So Writes Woman After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Jamestown N. Y.—"I was nervous, easily excited and discouraged and had no ambition. Part of the time I was not able to sit up as I suffered with pains in my back and with weakness. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, both the liquid and tablet forms, and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash for inflammation. Today I am real well and run a rooming house and do the work. I recommend your medicine to every woman who complains, and you may use my letter to help any one else. I am passing through the Change of Life now and I keep the Vegetable Compound in the house, ready to take when I feel the need of it."—Mrs. ALICE D. DAVIS, 203 W. Second St., Jamestown, N. Y.

Often some slight derangement may cause a general upset condition of the whole system, indicated by such symptoms as nervousness, backache, lack of ambition and general weakness.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will be found a splendid medicine for such troubles. In many cases it has removed the cause of the trouble.

SAVANNAH IS READY TO GREET SOLDIERS

Transport St. Mihiel With Over 1,200 Aboard Expected to Arrive There Wednesday Morning.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 6.—Savannah was in holiday attire today for the celebration in honor of the arrival of the last of the American army of occupation. Flags floated from all buildings and ships in the harbor were gaily bedecked.

A cold wind was blowing today and temperatures hovered around the lowest of the season but the weather bureau promised warmer breezes tomorrow.

The transport St. Mihiel, bearing approximately 1,200 officers and men of the eighth infantry regiment, together with three German mothers-in-law, fifty-three German wives and twenty-one German-American kiddies, is expected to cross the Tybee bar at the entrance of the harbor about 7 a. m. tomorrow. The ship will dock about 9 a. m.

As the ship crosses the bar a salute by a battery of French 75's and two revolutionary war cannon given to Savannah by George Washington, will be fired in honor of the troops. Hundreds of whistles from ships in the harbor will add to the din.

Following the debarkation of the troops a mammoth parade of the returned soldiers and army units from this section will be held.

Wives and children of the troops will be housed in a number of bungalows built at Fort Screven, near here. Of the 869 enlisted men, 460 of them will be stationed at Fort Screven and the remainder distributed to Forts Sam Hourton, San Antonio; Fort Bliss, El Paso; Fort Moultrie, Charleston, S. C.; and New York. Under a special dispensation all married troopers will be discharged immediately on landing, if they make application.

A half holiday has been proclaimed by Mayor Seabrook, and banquets, barbecues, dances and other festivities have been arranged for the two days' celebration in honor of the "American watch on the Rhine."

HARDING DELAYS MESSAGE

Will Send Communication on Debt Funding Law to Congress Wednesday.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—President Harding will delay until tomorrow his message asking congress to modify the debt funding law so that the British agreement may be accepted, Secretary Christian announced at the white house today.

PETITION IN BANKRUPTCY.

William Weir, merchant at Raymond, filed petition in bankruptcy Tuesday, saying he owed $37,963.15 and had assets worth $38,949.42. The latter figure includes realty valued at $2,200 and an $8,000 stock in trade.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Advertisement.

YOUR -- PROBLEMS

By Mary Gordon

Dear Mary Gordon. I don't know whether you answer letters from people outside of Lincoln or not but I have been so interested in your wise and motherly advice that I've decided to confide my troubles in you. About two years ago I met a young man with whom I fell in love. He left without telling me of his love but I knew he loved me sincerely. He is a fine, manly fellow working his way thru the university at Lincoln. After he was gone I met another young man with whom I grew to be good friends. I enjoyed myself all the time while with him, but we—I, at least—was nothing but a friend.

Then one day my sweetheart in Lincoln wrote and told me of his love and asked me if it was returned. My answer, of course, was "Yes." When he came home we spent many happy hours together. During this time he told me if I wanted to, to let other boys take me places as he wanted me to have a good time, but I could see he would rather I wouldn't.

After he went back I decided not to accept other boys' attentions and so I wrote my friend and cancelled a date and wouldn't make any others. His brother wrote me and told me he (my friend) was heartbroken and he loved me very much and couldn't understand why I had written him such a letter.

Should I accept his attentions or not? And do you think I should tell him of my love for the Lincoln boy? I like him as a friend very much, but I'm afraid if I go with him he will make love to me and that would certainly break our friendship. His parents are very well thought of and he is a leader in church activities. I don't know what I should do. Please advise me—Gloria.

A.: There is only one straightforward thing for you to do, Gloria. Tell the second young man that you have reached an understanding with the one in Lincoln. If he still wishes to call on you, tell him he must be content to be just a pal.

I'm sure the man at the university would be proud if he knew how faithful you are to him. And I know, too, that down here in Lincoln he's just as true to you.

Out-of-town letters are more than welcome. Let me hear from you again.

Ella: Here is the mock cherry pie you asked for, warranted to "make a hit":

One large cup cranberries, each cut in two; 1 cup sugar or three-fourths the quantity of white syrup; 1-2 cup water, 1 tablespoon flour, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla and 1-2 teaspoon almond extract, a pinch of salt. Do not leave out the almond, as that is what gives the pie the flavor of fresh cherries. Bake with two crusts. Sprinkle sugar sparingly over the top when done.

Dear Mary Gordon: I need not say that I am writing in defense of "Wistful"; the following will make that very clear to you. I think it perfectly heartless of you to answer poor Wistful as you have. I certainly hope this monster husband is at least furnishing her with food, clothing and the bare necessities of life; but this alone will not bring happiness, not by any means. Put yourself in her place; that is the best way to realize what she is going thru. You know and we all know that there was absolutely no excuse for this husband not going to see her while in the hospital. He doesn't work night and day.

Do not ever try to excuse a man who would be such a brute as to treat a woman with the cruel indifference that he has poor Wistful. He is not fit to be a father, and this poor woman has gone thru the "valley of the shadow" for him—the terrible pangs of childbirth—and from your point of view he is showing his appreciation.

In a case like this (unless she has a good strong brother to wield a horse-whip which might cause this creature to eat off the mantle for a week) a divorce is the only relief, and she should see to it that he is made to support her and the babe.—Justice.

A.: We all have faults, Justice, and sometimes I think husbands have more than their share. Neglect is one thing a woman finds it hard to overlook, but there are far worse things. I know two or three women who have much more to complain of in their married careers than has Wistful, but they lead comparatively happy lives. It isn't the quitter who wins in the game of life, you know; it's the one who sets his teeth hard and endures and keeps straight ahead.

I was glad to have your views and will appreciate hearing from you again.

American troops should be shoulder to shoulder with the French in occupation of the Ruhr, Alvin W. Owsley, national commander of the American Legion, said in an address.

LATE NEWS OF YESTERDAY

BIG FIRMS IN COMBINE

HARDY FIRM AND TILTON FURNITURE AMALGAMATE.

W. E. Hardy Will Continue President While M. H. Tilton Will Retain Control of Wholesale Division.

Two of Lincoln's oldest furniture concerns were consolidated when the contract for amalgamation of the Hardy Furniture company, retail furniture store, and M. H. Tilton Furniture company, wholesale furniture concern, was completed Monday afternoon. The consolidation becomes effective immediately. The combined concern will operate under the firm name of Hardy Furniture company and when the financing is completed will have a working capital of nearly three-quarters of a million dollars. Both wholesale and retail business will be conducted. W. E. Hardy will be president of the parent or holding company and the wholesale business will continue under the same management as in the past with M. H. Tilton as head.

The wholesale business will continue to be conducted under the firm name of M. H. Tilton and George Holland and A. J. Loeber will be associated with Mr. Tilton in the wholesale division. M. H. Tilton becomes a director of the Hardy Furniture company under the consolidation. It is the intention of the newly combined concern to considerably enlarge the wholesale lines carried by the M. H. Tilton company. They will add very soon a full line of rugs, linoleums and window shades for jobbing purposes.

"The M. H. Tilton Furniture company carried furniture only, and we feel Lincoln needs a jobbing house to take care of the entire trade in this line," said E. C. Hardy. "We feel that it will assist to build up the jobbing interest in Lincoln and hope to build up a large trade so that sufficient stock to take care of the needs of the Lincoln territory can be carried profitably."

Other plans for expansion are being contemplated by the firm. "This will enable the Hardy Furniture company to open an exchange store on the P street frontage which is now being used as a warehouse," Mr. Hardy said. "We intend to add a new front and other improvements to make it a first class retail store. We will also add improvements in our retail store. What might be called a de luxe floor will be fitted up for the display of the most attractive furniture in our stock. We expect to spend considerable money in decoration, carpets and other furnishings for this floor."

This consolidation joins two firms that are well known over the state as well as in the city of Lincoln. M. H. Tilton has been at the head of the M. H. Tilton Furniture company for thirty-seven years and is one of the oldest and best known furniture men in the state. The Hardy Furniture company was established by H. W. Hardy fifty-two years ago and is considered to be the oldest furniture house in Nebraska.

YORK MAN HAS DISAPPEARED

Came to Lincoln Friday and Did Not Return Home as Expected.

J. R. Graham, forty-four years old, a prominent farmer of near York, Neb., disappeared Friday. He came to Lincoln Friday to obtain some threshing machine repairs and was expected to return that night. He was last seen at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon by Wray Woods, manager of the Minneapolis Threshing Machine company. He told Mr. Woods that he intended to take a bus back to York but if the bus had gone he would return on the next train.

His family and neighbors became alarmed when he had not shown up by Sunday and notified the Lincoln police department. Mr. Graham has never been in any trouble of any sort in his life, according to neighbors. He has lived near York for thirty-five years. His farm is four miles north of that city. He is five feet six inches tall and weighs 125 pounds.

Captain Anderson is investigating the case. Mr. Graham has light hair, gray eyes and is smooth faced. He is somewhat baldheaded. He was wearing a gray overcoat and a cap when last seen. He is married and has seven children. Some friends of Mr. Graham were in the city Monday. It was intimated that he had not been well in the last year. W. A. Powers, of near York, is in the city helping to solve the mystery. Mr. Graham told his wife that he would return Friday night or early Saturday.

Amusements.

It is an interesting experience to see for the first time a play with so much success behind it that its place in the dramatic world is already assured; a play that has broken all metropolitan records and is so warmly accepted in the provinces that it seems certain to have a permanent place in the history of the native American drama. A capacity audience of Lincoln people enjoyed that pleasure at the Orpheum on Monday night. The verdict so far as it could be weighed was all in favor of the legitimacy of Frank Bacon's achievement. By every test of the local success of a performance, "Lightnin'," with Thomas Jefferson in the part of "Bill Jones," was everything the audience and the management could desire.

The production is the next best thing to seeing the much loved Frank Bacon in his famous role. The company is made up of stars long associated with the play. Many of the people in the long cast have been seen here in well-known companies. Bessie Bacon, daughter of the late Frank Bacon, gives life to the part of "Margaret Davis," and her husband, Matthew Allen, who was with Mayor Zehrung when he operated the Oliver theater, is manager of the company. It is clear that Lincoln sees the play under the most favorable circumstances that are now possible. The substitution of Mr. Jefferson for Mr. Bacon, whose death occurred only a few months ago, makes no vital difference. Some sensitive auditors claim to detect slight differences, a little variation in the stressing of the stories, but the general effect is unchanged.

One of the impressions gained from reading reviews of "Lightnin'" for years was that it is a one-man play. Nothing could be farther from the truth. It is a big production with a heavy company and an interesting series of stories winding around the central theme. The hotel with the California-Nevada state line running thru the office; the interest attaching to exploitation of forest, power and summer resort property; the zip furnished by the presence of a group of ladies who choose to spend six months on the state line instead of at Reno—these things make up a play that would go without the help of that lovable old rascal, "Bill Jones."

But of course he completes the play. He rounds it out and makes it a comfort and a delight. A great thing about this part is its mildness. It seems to attempt to subordinate itself to the other characters, to hide itself among the positive people who are doing things all thru the piece. Of course old Bill cannot be lost because after all his shiftlessness, slowness, and general human weaknesses, he is still a man who can never do a mean action, can never be selfish, and can never tell a lie. Any person with those qualities is bound to win love and approval. Mr. Jefferson's "Bill" won a great demonstration. In his curtain speech the actor said that as his father was accustomed to tell his hearers that he had played "Rip Van Winkle" before their fathers and grandfathers, so he had an ambition to play "Bill Jones" before the children and the grandchildren of those in the audience.

The play is put on with good scenery and all the necessary accessories. The court room is unusual in the correctness of the furnishings and the number of people taking part as litigants, officers and spectators. The author takes liberties with court procedure, but all of them do that. The judge, the sheriff, and all of the other court functionaries provoked no end of amusement for the audience.

JUDGE UPHOLDS THE ELECTION OF MATSON

Definitely Decides That if All the Ballots Cannot Be Recounted No Part of Them Can Be.

County Judge Reid has definitely ruled that if all ballots cast in an election cannot be counted, none of them can be counted for the purpose of contesting the election of any official. Attorneys for Wade A. Wilson, democratic contestant for the office now held by County Attorney Matson, introduced evidence Monday afternoon to show that all the requirements of law were carried out in the matter of returning ballots from Lancaster 1-C, University Place, to the county clerk's office.

They offered to introduce the ballots in evidence to substantiate his contention that Mr. Wilson received more votes than Mr. Matson, but the judge ruled that inasmuch as a part of the ballots of the county should not be counted because they had been improperly preserved, those which had been cared for properly could not be counted. The witness from University Place was J. M. Paul, who served as a clerk of the election board. O. C. Bell, deputy county assessor, who served as one of the judges of precinct A, fifth ward, also testified that the ballots from his precinct were returned properly.

DECLARES HE HAS REGAINED FIFTEEN POUNDS ON TANLAC

Nothing Like It to Build Solid Foundation of Health, States Gary, Ind., Man.

When it comes to giving a man a solid foundation of health and strength, Tanlac just can't be beat," said John Kuekecki, well-known carpenter and contractor, of 1720 Pennsylvania Ave., Gary, Ind., recently.

"Besides picking up fifteen pounds taking Tanlac, it made me so well and strong I can now keep pace with the speediest carpenters on any contract.

"Indigestion had been hammering away at my system until my appetite was almost gone. I was losing weight fast, and was all run-down. I had a burning feeling in my stomach, gas well-nigh smothered me, there were tacking pains all through my body, and at times I was terribly weak, nervous and dizzy.

"Well, sir, it looked like my troubles were going to 'floor' me and it was like finding gold to run across Tanlac. Why, my ailments are all gone now, and I eat heartily, sleep fine, and call myself one of the healthiest men in this town today."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists.

BRYAN VETOES SALARY BILL

NO TRIMMING OF PAY FOR SIX CODE SECRETARIES.

Veto Message Considered in Senate as Notice That He Will Not Approve Any Amendments to Code Law.

Governor Bryan's message vetoing S. F. 1, Reed's bill cutting salaries of the six code secretaries was received in the senate Monday afternoon. J. H. Broady, secretary to the governor, presented the message and read it aloud to the senators. It was received in silence. Senator Reed made no movements to call for a vote to override the veto. Other business was taken up and the incident was apparently forgotten. After the session closed Senator Reed said he believed a three-fifths vote necessary to override could be had in the senate, but he did not believe he would make the attempt.

Democrats in the house withheld their votes from this bill when it passed that body and it is not believed the veto could be overriden in that body. It passed the house with an emergency clause and would therefor not have gone into effect until three months after adjournment of the legislature if it had been approved by Governor Bryan.

The veto message is considered in the senate as notice from Governor Bryan that he will not approve any amendments to the code law, but that the legislature must repeal the law in its entirety and accept the governor's plan of reorganizing the departments now under the code law.

The senate on medical societies, Osborne of Morrill, chairman, will meet Thursday at 3:30 in the senate chamber to consider H. R. No. 17, to prevent discrimination in the employment of special physicians to treat patients in state institutions, introduced by Duball, and H. R. No. 39, by Davis of Cass, which provides that no child shall submit to physical examination in public schools over the objection of his parents. The present law does not appear to make examinations compulsory, but it provides that children showing signs of infectious disease shall be sent home immediately or as soon as safe and proper. The bill also provides that nothing in the act shall authorize any agent of the public schools to enter any home over objections of owners and that no child shall be compelled to submit to a medical or surgical treatment. The present law does not compel any of these things.

The committee on child welfare, Barr of Gage, chairman, will meet Wednesday next at 2 o'clock. No particular bills have been singled out for discussion. Dance hall and movie censorship bills are among bills referred to this committee.

The axe was put to three house bills by committees Monday afternoon. They were:

H. R., 252, by Ernst.—Requiring that makers of mortgages be notified of any assignment.

H. R. 253, by Keck.—Providing a method of ousting public officers who fail or refuse to enforce the motor vehicle law.

H. R., 310, by Green.—Providing for punishment of persons who damage or trespass upon lawns, yards, and gardens, enclosed or unenclosed

These were sent to the general file, all amended:

H. R., 260.—Providing for mortgaging of insane spouse's property.

H. R., 138.—Repealing law relating to approval of bonds in appeal cases.

H. R., 197.—Limiting tax that can be levied by county high schools to four mills instead of eight.

H. R. 147—Requiring a three-fifths affirmative vote to carry school bonds and barring resubmission for a year, if defeated.

MERE MENTION

Earl F. Lewis, a salesman, was arrested Monday evening on a charge of drunkenness. It is alleged that a pint bottle partially filled was found in his possession.

Fred Walker, 939 South Eleventh street, was arrested Monday afternoon on a charge of violating the new parking ordinance. He is to appear in police court Tuesday morning.

A verdict for $300 in favor of John C. Stewart against the City of Lincoln was returned by a jury in district court Monday afternoon for damages the plaintiff said he sustained when the bad condition of Holdrege street in June, 1922, caused a collision between the Stewart auto and a street car. Mr. Stewart alleged that his auto dropped into a hole in the street and swung aside so that it was struck by a passing trolley on Holdrege between Twenty-first and Twentieth streets. He had sued for $700 damages.

J. P. Pomerene, of Omaha, in Lincoln representing the state bankers' association, will address the members of the student's forum at the Wednesday meeting to be held in the law building beginning at 7 p. m. The subject for debate will be "Resolved that the state bank guaranty law should be repealed immediately." The affirmative will be upheld by B. Frank Waston, and the negative by Lyman C. Sorenson. A member of the forum association committee stated that J. E. Hart, secretary of the state department of trade and commerce, would be present.

Mr. W. E. Graham of Boise, Ida., general superintendent of the C. C. Anderson company Golden Rule stores of Idaho and Utah, was a visitor in Lincoln the other day for the express purpose of inspecting the leading stores in Lincoln. He was most favorable impressed and wondered how so small a city as Lincoln could support such large and modernly equipped stores—stores that would do credit to cities two to five times the size of Lincoln. "Lincoln merchants, said Mr. Graham, "show an immense amount of confidence in the people of Lincoln and the future prosperity of Nebraska."

The Lincoln community training school held its first meeting in University hall Monday evening at 7:30. There were twenty-seven students registered. The address of the evening was made by Rev. H. H. Harmon of the First Christian church on, "The Value of Intensive Religious Training in the Church Schools." Class was taught by Miss Mary Ellen Brown of the state Sunday school association in the absence of J. E. Warington. The churches represented included the Caldwell United Brethren, Grace Methodist, Havelock Methodist, First Christian, Butler Avenue Congregational, Warren Methodist, Second Baptist, Mt. Zion Baptist, Lincoln Heights Methodist, and St. Paul Methodist.

The demurrer of County Attorney Matson to the suit in district court of the Brown real estate company and twenty others, who seek to overthrow the assessment of the county commissioners on the penitentiary-asylum paving loop district, was argued Monday afternoon before District Judge Morning and taken under submission. The county attorney and his associate, J. E. Flansburg, were given five days in which to prepare a brief. The case involves $300,000 in assessments which it is said would be thrown back upon the county to pay. Mr Matson said he had secured the assistance of Attorney Flansburg, and that the cost of his services to the county would be nothing. The demurrer was a general denial that the objections of the plaintiffs to a blanket assessment constituted a cause of action against the county commissioners and county treasurer.

WOMAN WAR VETERAN DIES

Enlisted as a Man and Served Thru Many Battles in the Civil War.

PAWNEE CITY, Neb., Feb. 5.—Mrs. Clara Gear Hobson of Omaha, former resident of this city, died at the home of her daughter in Garden City, Mo., and was buried at Hanscom park cemetery in Omaha. Her husband was pastor of the Methodist church here in the early eighties. Mrs. Hobson was ninety-three years old. She was, so far as her family has been able to ascertain, the only woman who enlisted in the civil war forces as a man, and served with a regular regiment. She went with her husband at the call for troops, and served by his side thru many battles. She remained calm when D. B. Henderson, later a congressman from Illinois, fainted away at the sight of the horrors of war. She was given all military honors at the grave.

A resolution opposing any change in the Reed-Norval act, as is now proposed in the state legislature, and calling on the Lancaster county legislators to do all in their power to prevent any change in the language law, was unanimously adopted Monday night at a meeting of Lincoln post No. 3 of the American Legion.

The chairman of the Americanzation committee further announced that it was planned in the near future to propose for adoption a resolution asking for the compulsory teaching of history and civics in all public schools.

A Contribution to Woman's Happiness

Why do so many women who write to the Cantilever factory make a point of the happiness derived from merely a pair of shoes? The common conception of happiness is to be in a position of wealth, power, social leadership, or fame; but people who have "gone through the mill" say it's the little things that count.

A trained nurse wrote the following letter:

"Comfortable shoes make life so much easier for every woman whether she be a trained nurse, a school teacher, a society woman, a home-loving mother or a business woman.

"Speaking from the standpoint of a Public Health nurse would say that I never knew what a really comfortable shoe was like until I began wearing the Cantilever Shoes. After wearing them for two years no other make of shoe is comfortable.

"For several years I was continually treating a sore corn but since wearing Cantilever Shoes, in which there is room for the toes without crowding, the corn causes me no discomfort whatever.

"The heels of the Cantilever Shoes are comfortable and modish. In fact, when one once becomes accustomed to the low heels, the high heels which cause bad posture and fatigue are impossible. Not long ago the women who wore low heels were looked upon as a curiosity, but the present day styles in shoes will be the means of making life far happier for those women who conform to style and in this instance adopt the low-heeled, broad-toed shoe so perfectly complete in the Cantilever Shoes."

We are exclusive agents in this city for Cantilever Shoes and will take pleasure in showing them to you, hoping that you will give them a trial for they promise to add to your daily life comfort, good posture ease in walking, freedom from foot fatigue without sacrificing that last item of appearance which every woman desires.

Public Now Prefers Vegetable Laxatives

THE public is constantly becoming more discriminating in its choice of things. Those subject to constipation try to learn what makes them constipated, and then avoid it. If constipation persists in spite of all their efforts they take the mildest, most easily tolerated laxative obtainable, and not a drastic physic that upsets them for days afterwards. As over 10 million bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are sold a year, a large proportion of the people of this country must believe that this mild vegetable compound is the proper remedy for them, and so it is. No need to take salt waters and powders that dry up the blood; coal-tar drugs in candy form that produce skin eruptions, or calomel that salivates. These drugs are "heroic measures", over-effective, weakening and griping.

The best constipation remedy is the one that moves the bowels without shock to your system, and such a one is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a vegetable compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with pleasant-tasting aromatics, and has been satisfactorily sold for 30 years. Unlike the harsher physics it does not produce a habit, and increased doses are not required; in fact, it so trains the stomach muscles that in time medicines of all kinds can be dispensed with.

Many take a teaspoonful of Syrup Pepsin once a week as a health safeguard. Others use it only when required, as, for example, Mrs. J. W. Borroughs of Little Rock, Ark., who finds it equally valuable for herself and the children, and Mr. Enas S. Costa of Watsonville, Cal., whose family uses it regularly. Try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in constipation, biliousness, piles, headaches, sallow complexion, and to break up fevers and colds. A generous-size bottle can be had at any drug store, and it costs only about a cent a dose!

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

Nebraska Wesleyan Coach Would Book Two Games to Break Present Deadlock

PERU IS OFFERED DATES ON SCHEDULE

Coach McCandless Wants to Establish Supremacy in State Conference Without Necessity of Post-Season Game.

Peru Normal, last year's state conference basketball champions, have been offered dates on the regular schedule of Nebraska Wesleyan. These two teams are tied for honors in the state loop and from all indications have everything that is necessary to maintain their perfect positions.

But they were not scheduled to play each other during the season. To alleviate any chance of a post-season game Coach McCandless named five dates, any two of which would be satisfactory to him, for a home-and-home series with Peru. He had not heard from Coach W. G. Speers Tuesday morning.

Suggests Five Dates.

The dates suggested by Coach McCandless are February 26, 27, 28 or March 2 and 3.

A change in the Wesleyan schedule this week has been made. Instead of a doubleheader Wednesday, Western Union will tackle the Methodists on that day and Chadron Thursday. The Methodists were scheduled to take on both these teams on Wednesday, playing a matinee and evening game in order to do it.

Four Games in Row.

This gives the Methodists four games in a row, Western Union opening Wednesday evening, followed by Chadron Thursday. Des Moines university is here for two games Friday and Saturday nights. The Methodists dropped two games to the latter team on its home floor, but these games were the first Wesleyan had played this season and since that time they have gained both improvement and confidence.

Mallory--Lenglen Fight is Resumed

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—She may not be a popular champion but Mrs. Molla Mallory, the queen of the American tennis court, is a good sport.

If she did not have the reputation for being such, she might be thought rather scheming in her sudden decision to go gaming after her rival Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen this winter, instead of waiting until summer.

Her campaign, however, may be regarded as strategic.

Mlle. Suzanne takes her five winter tournaments as sort of social activities that enable her to disport her new wardrobe and get in condition leisurely for the hard summer campaign ending at Wimbledon.

Opposition in the winter tournaments for the flashy French queen has always been so negligible that she could revel in the exhibition of her charms and her rare skill at tennis.

The dashing Suzanne had been taking things ever more easily this year. She has a heart to look after now and competition without the urge of strong opposition sometimes becomes a bore for the temperamental athlete.

Anyway, Suzanne was taken by surprise recently when she was almost defeated by the English star, Mrs. Beamish and later her escape from young Miss Dorothy Turner-Laing was just as close.

The tennis critics said that Suzanne wasn't on her game, but that she was a wise little champion in working up by degrees for the defense of her title at Wimbledon.

All of a sudden, then, up pops Mrs. Mallory with the announcement that she is going to Europe the first week of February to compete in the same five tournaments and that she was not going to play at Wimbledon.

While she would not admit of any personal designs, Mrs. Mallory did not deny the possibility of meeting the French girl in one of the five tournaments.

Mrs. Mallory has been planning for a long time to engage in the mid-winter classics and it is not her fault that the French girl is not on her top form.

NEXT OLYMPIC TEAM COMPRISED OF VETS

Many Tickets to Next Meeting at Paris Already Cinched—Last Team Had Only Six Athletes of Experience.

By Henry L. Farrell.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—With the indoor season half over, it has become apparent that many of the tickets for the Olympic jaunt to Paris in 1924 have been cinched.

When the United States team went to Antwerp in 1920 there were only six athletes in the bunch who had had previous experience in the Olympic games. They were Dan Ahearn, Pat McDonald, Ted Meredith, Fred Murray, Pat Ryan and Matt McGrath.

About All Veterans.

The long interim between the games on account of the war, was responsible for a practically new team and perhaps it should not be considered unusual or a slap at the new generation that Uncle Sam's netx team will be composed almost entirely of veterans.

In three years only a handful of new athletes have been developed. The most outstanding of the athletes who were not on the 1920 team but who no doubt will go to Paris are Alfred Le Coney and Bob McAllister, sprinters; Leroy Brown, Dartmouth high jumper; Allen Hellfrich, middle distance runner and Gourdin, the world's champion broad jumper.

In another year a flock of new stars may be developed, but it is not probable.

Certain To Go.

Form shown this winter makes it appear certain that the next team will have on it Joie Ray, champion middle distance runner; Jimmy Connolly and Jake Driscoll for the same distance; Loren Murchison, Bob McAllister and Jack Scholz, sprints; Leroy Brown, Dick Landon, and Johnny Murphy, high jump; Willie Plant, walks; Earl A. Johnson, distance events, and Pat McDonald and Matt McGrath, weights.

While they have not been engaged this winter in active competition it is a bet that Charley Paddock, Brick Muller, Jack Merchant, Bob Legendre, Frank Zuna, Sol Butler, Allen Woodring and Ray Watson will be on the team.

"My 30 Years in Baseball" By John J. McGraw, Manager New York Giants

ARTICLE 33.

The Affidavit—Making a Ball Club—Getting Back at the Fans—Police Protection in Cincinnati.

During those stirring days of 1905, when some sort of a scrap was an ordinary event in every city, our strongest opponents were the Pittsburgh Pirates. All our efforts were aimed at them because they were the contenders for the pennant.

To this day the fans of Pittsburgh have a keen animosity to the Giants. That, I think, is a good thing for baseball. Sportsmanship and easy going methods are all right, but it is the prospect of a hot fight that brings out the crowds. Personally I never could see this idea of taking a defeat philosophically. I hate to lose and I never feel myself beaten until the last man is out. I have tried to instill that same fighting spirit into all the teams I have managed.

Wants Plenty of Fight.

I can appreciate the fine work of opposing players but, at the same time, I'm not much for that show of friendly feeling on the field. Off the field—yes. But once a team of mine is on the diamond I want them to fight. Namby-pamby methods don't get much results.

Nothing ever gave our players more delight than to go back at fans and players who had started to give them a razz. I never tried to discourage them in this, either. A team that will fight back on an enemy diamond and before an enemy crowd is pretty well able to take care of itself. The players gain confidence in themselves by maintaining this cock spirit.

Fans always resent the fighting back of a visiting ball club and that usually leads to trouble. I never could see, tho, why a ball player should be expected to take insults and razzing without retort just because he was in a city other than his own. While on the road we had hot arguments of this kind daily. Often the fans got so enraged that they would follow our carriages and hurl epithets—and other things—at us. All of this tended to make us a great drawing card on the road. Fans could rest assured that when the Giants arrived there would be action of some kind at the park.

This also furnished the newspaper men with a lot of material for sensational stories. That also helped. It's much better to be knocked and roasted than to be unnoticed.

To give you an idea how seriously some of these incidents were taken, we had a game in Pittsburgh one day that broke up in a forfeiture and an official protest. Ritchie, the Pirate second baseman, went into third on a play, and it looked as if he was easily out. Neither of the umpires would say one way or the other. I ran from one to the other trying to make him give a decision. The best I got was "Go and play ball."

Game Ends in Protest.

I protested that I couldn't go on until I knew whether the runner was out or safe. As a result, the game ended right there, with me giving notice of an official protest.

Mr. Brush was with the team at the time. While he pretended to depiore scraps, he really revelled in them. He was determined to fight out the protest. We were going to Chicago that night, so he wired ahead and engaged a notary public to take acknowledgments of affidavits. I guess we were the strongest affidavit-making club in the world, it seems to me that we used to go around swearing to official papers as a sort of routine. It was fun, too.

One of the party of New York newspaper men accompanying us had been a lawyer. He was promptly assigned to write out the affidavits in regular legal form and then have the players, manager, owner and other newspaper men swear to them. Of course, our evidence showed the umpires to be entirely wrong.

Arriving at Chicago we got a special room and spent the whole morning rounding up our affidavits. The newspaper-man-lawyer would write the paper something like this:

"Being duly sworn, John Jones deposed as follows, to-wit:

Much Legal Verbiage.

"I am a resident of the city of New York and my occupation or profession is the playing of baseball for a team known as the New York Giants. My special occupation in the pursuit of said profession is the playing of a position known as second base and one requiring a certain amount of physical dexterity and mental acumen.

"On the day of July 7, 1905, while engaged with the said Giants in a game of baseball with an opposing team known as the Pittsburgh Pirates, I was stationed at second base and was in position to see clearly a certain play made at third base by one Ritchie, an opposing player, it being part of his professional skill to slide into the said third base, sack or cushion so as to avoid being touched with a baseball in the hands of one Arthur Devlin, known as a third baseman.

"Your deponent further saith, etc."

It gives me a laugh every time I think of the affidavits. Without questioning the player at all the utility lawyer would go into all that rigamarole. The player would be called in and sworn.

"Read that carefully and tell me if that is correct," the notary public, who didn't know what it was all about, would say.

"You're right," the ball player would declare, and affix his name.

Tossed Bundles Aside.

Of course, we didn't win the protest. We never did. In making protests I am sure our club had the smallest percentage of victories of any club in the world. But we kept on making affidavits, on the slightest provocation at any time or any place. Finally it got to where Harry Pulliam, the president of the league, would open one of these bulky packages.

"Oh, it's some more of those darned Giant affidavits," I have heard him say, and would promptly toss the whole bundle aside.

"All right." Mr. Brush would say, with a twinkle in his eye. "Now we've got that one over, we'd better get ready for another one in the next town."

"Say," he said to me one day, "don't you think we had better wire to the chief of police in Cincinnati and ask protection for our players?"

That was a good notion, I thought. So we called in the newspaper men, who were always eager for such fun. They promptly sent stories about the need of police protection. The Cincinnati officials wired back that a visiting club would certainly be protected.

The public couldn't understand what it was all about, but for fear something might happen and they would miss it they filled the park. Mr. Brush had a very dry sense of humor and he used to chuckle over starting things like that. You understand, we had not really needed any protection.

There were times, tho, that we did. On one trip to Philadelphia we really did have to call on the superintendent of the department of correction—police commissioner—and ask that the players be protected.

Suggested By-Ways.

The first official we saw intimated that we ought to stay off the main streets and go up the back ways to avoid trouble. He was against us.

The start of that trouble was an attack on our carriages outside the park in which Roger Bresnahan, riding with the driver, was hit on the head with a brickbat and knocked to the ground.

Roger, who was a sort of detective in his home town, had piled up stones at his feet so as to be ready, but the fellow with the brick beat him to it.

NORTH PLATTE LAYS CLAIM TO A TITLE

By Winning Over Gothenburg Cagesters Westerners Remove Last Obstacle—Have One Open Date.

NORTH PLATTE, Neb., Feb. 5.—North Platte now claims the basketball championship of western Nebraska, following the defeat of Gothenburg here Friday night. It was one of the tightest games played this season by either team. When the second half ended the score stood 10 to 10. Two extra periods were required to break the deadlock, the final count being 16 to 14.

The North Platte basketeers base their claim for the title on the fact that they have defeated Alliance, northwestern contenders; Sidney, from the immediate west; Gothenburg and Kearney from the central west.

North Platte has an open date February 9, due to the cancelation of the western trip planned for the University Place basketeers.

Luis Firpo Comes Back for the Gold

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Almost like "Tattered Tom," the poor little hero of the paper-back novel, who rose from an ash barrel to a palace, Luis Angel Firpo, South American giant is coming back to New York as somebody.

Just a year ago, Firpo slipped into New York from the Argentine looking for a meal. He thought he could fight and he wanted some of the big money he heard was being passed out to fighters in this country. Firpo wasn't known then. He couldn't get matches and his money was low, so he had to train in a cellar. Finally he got on a card in Jersey with Sailor Maixted and he got $150 for knocking out the Sailor.

That helped him a little and he got a $1,000 match with Joe McCann. He knocked out McCann and he got a $3,000 match in Brooklyn against Jack Herman. He knocked out Herman and went home to South America with his earnings.

Now Firpo is coming back and he'll be talking in large thousands. He's a "card" at the most opportune time when the heavyweight class is coming into its greatest period of activity in years.

Firpo is signed to meet Bill Brennan in Madison square garden in March and he must be getting $25,000 as his end, if he is getting a cent.

A fortunate young man is Luis Firpo.

He knocked out Sailor Maixted, Joe McCann, Jack Herman and then polished off poor Jim Tracey, the Australian, who was so poor in this country that he couldn't get a match. Now, after this great start, Firpo is being groomed for a crack at Dempsey.

Paddock, Coast Sprinter, Begins Training for Eastern Invasion

Californian Will Appear in Eastern Competition for First Time—Questions His Own Ability.

By Jackson V. Scholz.

Editor's Note: Jackson V. Scholz was a member of the Olympic team which won honors for the United States at Antwerp. This University of Missouri sprinter is still on the track and recently won the metropolitan 70-yard championship and knows the game.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Charlie Paddock, one of the fastest things on two legs, is taking his proposed trip east seriously and has mapped out a strenuous period in preparation for the reception he expects to receive from eastern sprinters.

One of the most significant features of his training is the fact that he is not making the big mistake of underestimating his opponents, or of overestimating his own ability; and when an athlete passes thru the stages of success which Charlie has achieved and yet admits that he can be beaten, he is still a mighty dangerous antagonist and should be treated with all the respect due to a stick of dynamite.

Outlines His Plans.

In a recent letter Charlie outlined several of his plans for the near future.

"I never felt better in my life than I do now," he stated. "But whether I can run or not, is another question. You know sprinters are never in a position to answer that question until they have a few races under their belt. My first meet comes on February 17 in the annual southern California relay championships. I will try out in a 100 yards open that day and also in the relay.

"I run against California a month later in Los Angeles; Stanford a week after that, and then the following week I run in Berkley against California and three days later in Palo Alto against Stanford. These are annual return meets. Afterwards comes the final A. A. U. meet here and then for the east and the Penn relays and afterwards the intercollegiates, providing, of course, that I am still able to make the team."

Paddock Has Speed.

There is no reason to believe that Paddock has lost any of his speed since the Olympics and all his recent records go to show that he is a faster man now than he was at that time. Therefore, whether Paddock is at his best or not upon his arrival here, it will be a big feather in the cap of any sprinter who leads him to the tape.

McAllister, Murchison and Leconey at present look to be his logical opponents. McAllister, who has been discovered and developed in the last year, has not reached the peak of his speed yet, even tho he bears the enviable title of junior and senior national one-hundred yard champion. Murchison seems to be running as fast as ever and his famous start is still a thing to take the heart out of the best of them.

Leconey, altho he has covered himself with much glory in collegiat circles, is still more or less of an unknown quantity. He has registered some mighty fast time and beaten some good men, but he has still to meet several of the top liners, including McAllister and Murchison, in various distances and to kick cinders in the faces of some of the veterans, who have proved such obstacles in the path of aspiring youngsters during the last several years.

Judge Redick held that it did not, on the ground that while the general intention of the constitution-makers was expressed in the uniformity clause, it did seek to give a place for the municipal court. This being a particular intention it should be construed as an exception to the general rule.

GOVERNOR ANSWERS SMITH

Denies He Is Playing Politics in Opposition to State Indemnity for Tubercular Cattle.

Governor Bryan, replying to a letter written by H. R. Smith, commissioner of the national live stock exchange, denies that he is playing politics, in the matter of his opposition to state aid for the present federal cooperative plan of eradication of bovine tuberculosis.

"If I were playing politics I would favor a state appropriation," said Governor Bryan. "I oppose an appropriation by the state because I do not believe it eradicates, it does not prevent the spread and it is not a health measure. It is class legislation for the benefit of owners of registered herds who will get their doctor bills paid by the public. It helps these registered owners, the veterinarians and the packers.

"I had a talk recently with Mr. Smith. He told me he was receiving pay for his services in spreading this propaganda. He further told me he war in the pay of the packers. His letters should not be published by the press unless marked advertising matter for the benefit of the packers. You will find the federal government will soon stop paying indemnity for cattle afflicted with tuberculosis."

BLUFFS GIRL WEDDED HERE

Ethel Bainbridge Married to Harry Berry Here on Sunday Evening.

Ethel Bainbridge, twenty-one years old, student in the nurses' training school at the Jennie Edmunds hospital of Council Bluffs, was married to Harry J. Berry, twenty-six, of Paso Robles, Cal., by County Judge Robin Reid in Lincoln Sunday afternoon.

Miss Bainbridge had been missing from the hospital since Saturday, when she left to attend a picture show and failed to return. Her father John Bainbridge, a farmer from near Kingsley, Ia., Ex-Sheriff Groneweg, Ex-Deputy Sheriff J. B. Walcott and two nurses from the training school arrived in the city Monday evening to locate the missing girl. They discovered that she had checked out of a local hotel at 5 p. m. Monday.

Mr. Brainbridge made a search in Council Bluffs Monday for his daughter. She would have been graduated from the training school on August 15.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

George Bignell, father of Ed Bignell, superintendent of the northern division of the Burlington road, died at his home in Havelock at the age of eighty-two.

Headlines on the front page of the Journal told of peace measures declared to be progressing in Cuba, the fact that troops had been called out in Alaska because Americans were trying to get provisions into the Yukon free of duty, and the debate on the admission of Hawaii at Washington. The back page was occupied by the entire sermon of L. T. Guild at the Grace M. E. church, a story of how a stranger in Lincoln lost his bearings and his grip and some modest advertisements.

It had been a quiet week for the police, for some unaccountable reason, and the force had to sit around in the station and tell stories of past deeds in order to fill up the chinks in their time.

The Red Ribbon club held such an interesting meeting that a great many were turned away at the door. H. W. Hardy and Clark Oberlies made the principal speeches.

The Nebraska maximum freight rate case hung in the balance while the supreme court at Washington took a two weeks' vacation.

HOUSE MEMBERS ABOUT READY TO TOSS UP THE SPONGE.

Propose Either to Exact Degree of Comfort or Establish Selves in Up-Town Place Where Steam Sizzles.

Members of the lower house threaten to strike and move up town where they can hear the steam sizzle in the pipes and where they can safely hang their coats on wooden pegs without freezing to death. And this they may do without casting any shadows over the laws they pass. They cannot go to Havelock or University Place and legislate for the state of Nebraska but they may legislate in a hotel suite or ball room, a store room or even a church without there being doubt as to the legality of the legislation. If the senate puts it up to them, they may even pass S. F. 1 over the governor's veto if they care to do it. In such instance, all the king's horses and all the king's men couldn't veto it over again.

The house has been sick for several days and the members not only are grumpish and dumpish and coughish, but they are out of patience. They are sore enough to pull stakes unless the chamber is made comfortable. They do not look for warmth but they do crave less cold. They want the fires to burn. They believe that it is physically possible to patch the windows and furnish blinds.

A movement was put thru Saturday to require a night fireman. It was alleged Tuesday that the heat was not turned on until 8 a. m. The speaker appointed a committee of three to talk with the commissioner of lands and funds who is custodian of the building. Dr. Colman, just up from his sick bed, is chairman. His colleagues are Messrs. Betshausen and Lamb.

Another specific complaint has to do with the blinding, swirling dust from janitor brooms. It is alleged that janitors go to work at 4 p. m. when they should not start sweeping until 6 o'clock. Members gave testimony relative to quantity and character of dust swallowed by them.

George B. Collins of Omaha said that it isn't alone the cold. The old air, he alleged, that was in about Christmas time, is still in. George S. Collins, also of Omaha, disputed his colleague. He said that new air pours in continuously thru a broken window.

At the conclusion of the morning session, members interested in the potato industry, discussed the matter of inspection. The general belief is that unless potato inspection is compulsory, it is useless. Nebraska potatoes depend, it is believed, upon inspection for a high place on foreign markets. It also is believed, however, that present grading systems should be revised to assure uniformity.

BOY BLIND ELEVEN YEARS

Roy Mauler of Loup County With Sight of One Eye Restored, Visits Secretary Antles.

Roy Mauler eleven years old boy who never saw his native sand hills in Loup county until last November, is the guest of Secretary H. H. Antles of the department of public welfare, and Mrs. Hornberger, chief of the division of child welfare. The boy's eyesight was restored by a surgical operation performed by Dr. Gifford of Omaha after the state department and many citizens of Loup county had interested themselves in his welfare.

At the office of Mrs. Hornberger in the state house Roy played Tuesday forenoon. He was brought to Lincoln by Marcia G. Smith. hTe sight of one of the boy's eyes is now nearly normal and it is expected to become perfect. Another operation may be performed upon the other eye six months after the first.

The boy had never had the sight of either eye and has been deprived of opportunities to develop his mind. He is happy now and plays as a boy of four or five might do. He was busy Tuesday forenoon in Mrs. Hornberger's office playing with rough wooden blocks sawed from boards and scantling. These he placed inorder in a wooden box a foot or so in width. He was as intent on getting them in right as an infant might be. The box was on a chair and the blocks were on a table when he commenced.

"Now, I've got them fixed great," he gleefully cried when he had them all inside the box. He would hardly stop to notice visitors who came into the room to see him. He uses fairly good English, that being the only language he can speak, but his voice does not have a natural sound, and his articulation is not perfect.

Roy was shown a lead-pencil and asked what color it was. He correctly named it yellow. He was also able to distinguish red and blue. He just began to learn colors a few days ago. He knows nothing of Mother Goose, but has recently learned some short tales. His father is crippled and unable to do much work on a farm. His mother has other children to care for and had not had time to instruct the boy. He was kept in the background at home and hidden away when any one visited the farm house. He was found by a county public nurse, Ethel Batie, and her report led to his being taken to Omaha for a surgical operation. When he was first approached by Mrs. Hornberger, when he was still blind, he begged to be allowed to go to school. His eyes may soon be in a condition to permit him to do this. His shoulders are now stooped like those of a little old man. This is attributed to the fact that he spent many childhood years groping his his way about in darkness. He is well pleased with his trip to Lincoln and said he intends to stay here with Mrs. Hornberger and not go back if he has his way about it.

LEGION VAUDEVILLE SHOW

Plans Are Made and Date Set for the Big Orpheum Theater Event.

The fourth annual American Legion vaudeville show will be given February 12 and 13 at the Orpheum theater. It has always been one of the big home talent attractions of the year and this year's program promises to excel in attractiveness, variety and spice. The actors taking part in the various acts are all Lincoln people and many of them are well known to theater-goers.

The program includes such artists as Manley Phelps and Miss Myra Murray in a one act play "The Finger of God"; Leo Beck, supported by an excellent dancing and musical cast; Oz Black with his inimitable cartoons, supported by Gregg McBride: the glee club of the University of Nebraska with an excellent repertoire of songs; Archie Jones appearing in an unusual musical number; Jimmy Schuyler in a surprising and pleasing novelty act, the American Legion band with an attractive program and Miss Marian Kislingbury supported by artists of unusual talent.

Both Miss Murray and Mr. Phelps have appeared in many plays, readings and recitals before Lincoln people They are connected with the University School of Music and altho not natives of Lincoln their residence here has been sufficient to permit them to enjoy a large acquaintance in musical circles.

Leo Beck's musical and dancing act portrays the descent of the modern dance from the time of the Hindu until the present. Helen Mueller will be featured as a dancer and the orchestra will feature ideas taken from Greenwich village.

The University of Nebraska glee club is well known to Lincoln audiences. Archie Jones, assisted by a number of players with ability and Jimmy Schuyler in his clever musical and dancing act assures a delightful and pleasing attraction.

The ticket sale started about ten days ago and the final personal ticket sale will be conducted by members of the Lincoln Post. Headquarters for the sale will be at the chamber of commerce and tickets purchased in advance are to be reserved at the Orpheum theater box ticket office beginning at 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

CLUB BACKS MR. FENTON

Social Service Organization Votes Favoring His Fight for the Indeterminate Sentence.

A motion of support of Warden Fenton in his endorsement of the indeterminate sentence law was unanimously passed Tuesday at the noon luncheon of the social service club held at the Grand hotel. The motion was passed following the reading by Warden Fenton of a paper showing the benefits of the law as now stands.

He said that forty states have adopted it, that it has been in effect in Nebraska since 1911, and that no state in which it has been in force has repealed it. He declared it has reclaimed more men than any other human agency.

Discussion by members of the club showed that in states where it has been given a fair trial it has actually increased the length of sentences, instead of allowing criminals to go free, as members of the club said some people imagine.

Prof. S. L. Joshi, exchange professor from Bombay, India, gave a few remarks. The professor from India is delivering a six weeks' series of lectures at the university.

LINE WILL FOLLOW RIVER

Oil Conduit to Be Located Along the Platte as Far East as Kearney.

Route inspectors who are going over the proposed pipe line route from Teapot Dome, Wyo., to Freeman, Mo., who stopped at Bridgeport recently said the line would follow the Platte river as far east as Kearney and from there angle to the southeast. Hastings is trying to get the pipe line located thru that city. The inspectors said construction would begin in the early spring, and that some of the pipe for the line is now on the way. The line will have a capacity of 40,000 barrels a day.

WATERS IN JAIL AT OMAHA

Alleged Confidence Man Held—Claimed to Be Connected With Omaha Radio Company.

L. H. Waters, alleged confidence man, is lodged in the city jail of Omaha, and a scheme broken up by Captain of Detectives Anderson and authorities of the Lindell hotel.

A telegram was sent to the hotel by Waters in which he asked that a room be reserved for him from February 8 to the 12. He requested that his mail be held there and the collection charged be paid on any packages sent there. He claimed to be connected with the U. S. Radio company of Omaha.

A small package arrived at the hotel addressed to Waters. The charges were $13.70. Authorities became suspicious and notified Captain Anderson. The box was opened and found to contain a wad of paper and a small piece of copper wire instead of radio equipment. There is no such concern as the U. S. Radio company of Omaha, according to Captain Anderson. The sleuth head says that there are many such rings in operation thruout the country.

Hotel authorities were suspicious of the game of Waters because of an article that recently appeared in a hotel magazine. This article told of this means being used by confidence men.

FINED ON LIQUOR CHARGE.

NEWS FROM NEBRASKA

PETER BERGMAN IS DEAD

Owner of Twenty-one Farms and Perhaps Wealthiest Man in Polk County Passes Away.

OSCEOLA, Neb., Feb. 6.—Peter Bergman, one of the early settlers in this county, died at his home in Polk, Monday morning at 3 o'clock. He had been attending church during Sunday evening and, not feeling well, had started home. When about half way there he fell and was assisted to the house by neighbors who found him lying on the sidewalk. He had suffered a stroke of paralysis and death was only a matter of a few hours after.

Mr. Bergman leaves a wife and no children. Practically all of his relatives live in Sweden. He was a little over seventy-six years of age and was rated as one of the richest, if not the richest man in Polk county. He was the owner of twenty-one farms in this county at the time of his death. All of these were 160 tracts. He also owned 640 acres near North Platte. His investments other than lands were bonds of the general government. The estate will represent an investment of over a million dollars, all of which he has accumulated in Polk county during the last forty years.

MUCH BOOZE IS BEING SOLD

Omaha Courts Are Busy With Cases Against Bootleggers.

OMAHA, Feb. 6.—A Lincoln man in Omaha was taunted because of a recent statement in the State Journal that most of the liquor that reaches Lincoln comes from Omaha. The statement was made on the authority of a Lincoln police officer who had cited specific cases. Omaha people said that liquor is made in Lincoln and that Omaha comes in for a large amount of undesirable publicity. Much of it comes from the Omaha papers. From one paper, published at Omaha this morning, these statements relating to bootlegging appear:

Alertha Kibbon, 2718 Y, arrested Saturday night by South Side detectives after her four-year-old son, Frank, had led the officers to the out-door hiding place of two one-gallon jugs of alleged liquor was fined $100 in South court Monday.

Because of a faulty search warrant, Anna Drakulich, 5713 South Twenty-eighth, the alleged owner of sixty-nine quarts of beer and a half-quart of hooch, was discharged.

William Chaddock, 516 South Tenth, and W. Burton, a visitor at the place, yesterday were fined $100 each by County Judge Crawford on charges of illegal possession and sale of liquor.

"The law is the same for women bootleggers as it is for men bootleggers, and we are not concerned with how many children they have," declared Federal Judge Woodrough when Angela Nabole, 816 Poppleton, and Mary Francillo, 921 South Twelfth, each was before him on their pleas of guilty in connection with sales of liquor to prohibition agents. The Francillo woman carried a babe in her arms, and District Attorney Keyser informed the court she was about to become a mother to another. Mrs. Nabole had four small children.

Mrs. Rosa Belona, 2027 Pierce, who fainted when Samardick told her who he was, was in court but her case was postponed until Wednesday morning.

Miss Elizabeth Patuvina, fifteen, former Technical high school girl, youngest person arrested Saturday by Samardick on charge of sale or possession of liquor, gave her address as 513 Poppleton, but her relatives who live at that adress say she lives elsewhere.

Carmello Torasio, 2412 South Seventeenth, known to the police as the "rainbow bootlegger," was fined $100 in police court.

John Romero, 2712 Pacific, was held on a $1,000 bond to the district court in police court on a charge of operating a still.

CHERRINGTON AT OLD HOME

Y. M. Worker Spends Sunday at Gibbon.

GIBBON, Neb., Feb. 6.—Ben M. Cherrington, Y. M. C. A. student secretary of the Western region, with headquarters at Denver, spent Sunday here at his birth place and early boyhood home.

His oldtime friends and schoolmates filled the Presbyterian church in the evening to hear his thrilling message of the outlook of the student body of the colleges of the world. Mr. Cherrington was one of the party which accompanied and assisted the distinguished Sherwood Eddy in making a world survey of the higher institutions of learning after the close of the world war.

Mr. Cherrington's high school coure was completed in Omaha, after which he was graduated from the University of Nebraska. His present work brings him annually for a much anticipated visit among us. His father spends at least half of each year in our midst, as there are still farming interests here, while the winters are passed in California.

Mr. Cherrington was on his way from Hastings College to appear before the Kearney Teacher's college.

VALLEY COUNTY MAKES RECORD

Clubs Take Many Honors at Annual Fairs.

NORTH LOUP, Feb. 6.—According to the recently published report of Agricultural Agent Carl C. Dale, Valley county made the best record of any county in the state in club work. Among the seventy odd young people who were enrolled in the various clubs, they won at state and county fairs, not only a silver cup—in itself a great honor—but also thirty-four ribbons, five medals and about $450, in cash prizes. Valley county had not been represented at the state fair for the previous several years but it had not been on account of not having the stuff to exhibit but merely an apathetic attitude on the part of farmers and stockmen. Among the prizes won were best Shorthorn steer, best Hereford steer, first, second, third, seventh and eighth on baby beef, second and third on Poland China gilts and second and third on Duroc Jersey gilts. Valley county boys won second in cattle judging and the same in hog judging in competition with eighteen teams from other parts of the state. In view of the encouraging showing made last year, the county supervisors have authorized the appropriation of $3,000 to carry on the farm bureau work in this county in 1923.

Sentenced to Penitentiary.

HASTINGS, Neb., Feb. 6.—Charles Brown, colored, was sentenced to the penitentiary by Judge Dilworth for not more than two years nor less than one year, following conviction on a charge of forgery.

At the same time Jude Dilworth sentenced Adolph Potratz, a farmer, to thirty days in the county jail and gave him a fine of $500. He was convicted of the possession of a still and mash.

Roy Baxter was given thirty days in jail and a fine of $200 for the illegal possession and the sale of liquor.

To Combine Nemaha Papers.

AUBURN, Neb., Feb. 6.—J. C. Voline, publisher of the Nemaha County Herald of this city, consummated a deal here whereby he gains control of the Nemaha County Republican.

Mr. Voline expects to combine the two papers and erect a new building. The added equipment and new building will give him one of the best equipped publishing and job printing plants in southeastern Nebraska.

COLD WAVE IS PREDICTED

Omaha and Eastern Nebraska Have Prospects of More Winter Weather.

OMAHA, Feb. 6.—With a twenty mile northwest wind sending a light snow whirling thru the air and a temperature falling steadily, Omaha and eastern Nebraska had prospects this morning of experiencing some more real winter weather. The mercury dropped from 54 degrees at 4 p. m. Monday to 18 degrees at 7 a. m. today. A cold wave is predicted for tonight.

VALUE ON HIS CITIZENSHIP

Greek Would Give $1,000 to Possess Papers.

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., Feb. 6.—"I would give $1,000 right now for those papers," said Gus Valonis, a local Greek, again seeking American citizenship, when questioned about his application for the same. Valonis came to Grand Island about twenty years ago, and established a small fruit stand and confectionery business which soon grew to a good, profitable concern. In 1910 he made his first application. He failed to report within the required period of time and was obliged to file another application in 1918. A short time later, and sensing no danger, he made a visit to his mother in Greece and was promptly detained in that country for three years of military service. That over, he married and is again in his former business here, with his wife and infant child. There isn't going to be another hitch in acquiring citizenship in the good old United States this time, he says, if anything he is able to do can prevent it.

BRIEF STATE NEWS.

Grand Island—The American Beet Sugar company is putting out its growers' contracts for the 1923 season. Payment for beets is $6 per ton flat, as compared with $5 per ton flat last year; for siloed beets $1 per ton extra will be paid as compared with 75 cents last year; and for beet seed 15 cents per pound will be charged as compared with 20 cents last year. The present prospects indicate that the contract labor for the culture of the beets—thinning, furnished by the factory if the contractors desire—can be so provided at $21 per acre. This amount is subject to some fluctuation, tho not to a material difference.

North Loup—The church building owned by the United Brethren denomination, located several miles southwest of this place, has been raised by the John Jensen company of Ord, and a tiling and concrete block basement story built under the wooden structure to make room for a culinary department and larger space for social events. A new fuel storage, heating plant has also been installed.

York—At a regular meeting of the city council, Engineer Scott gave his final report of th ecost of paving just completed last month. The total amount was $139,577.81. The bonds were sold to a local trust company at five and one half per cent. Peters Trust company's bid was 6 per cent.

Hastings—Adams county Poland China breeders today formed a county Poland China organization, electing Clay Saddler, president; W. H. Fisher, vice president, and William Lowman, jr., secretary-treasurer.

Auburn—J. H. Mastin has purchased a tract of ground near the intersection of Twelfth street and Court House avenue, upon which he will erect a modern and up to date garage and machine shop in the spring.

STINER NOT TO RUN AGAIN

Imgraham of Hastings Will Again Seek Office of Mayor in Spring.

HASTINGS, Neb., Feb. 6.—Mayor L. B. Stiner, serving his second term as mayor, allayed city political rumors, by announcing he will not run to succeed himself in the spring.

Charles C. Imgraham, a former mayor, has virtually stated he will again seek the office, while two members of the council and William Madgett, also a former mayor, are considered probable candidates.

HAPPENINGS AT SURPRISE.

A. L. Phillips has returned from a month's visit at Winchester, Tenn., and Georgia and his old home at Bicknell, Ind. He had not been to Bicknell for eighteen years.

Herman Rath, jr., shipped a car load of hogs comprising sixty-eight head all of his own raising and feeding.

Mrs. D. L. Sylvester returned home from a week's visit with his daughter, Mrs. S. E. Johnston of Omaha.

FALLS CITY, Neb., Feb. 6.—James Thompson, living west of Falls City, had the misfortune to be kicked in the pit of the stomach by a mule, receiving severe injuries. He was taken to the hospital and has been unconscious most of the time. If the hemorrhages continue, an operation may be necessary.

Unfortunate Father.

"I think it would be lovely if we could go to California for six weeks" began the young person with the beguiling ways, encircling her father's neck with an arm. "Dilly Parker and her family are going and they know the loveliest hotel where——!"

"That's not to their credit, especially," broke in her wary father, shaking his head as best he could within her strangle hold. "Everybody else does, too,"

"Dilly says the nicest people are spending the winter at this Pomegranate inn," pursued the beguiling daughter, with a little sigh. "An extraordinary number of nice young men—not that it makes any difference to me, of course, tho I frequently have heard you and mother explain to me that it always is wise to choose one's associates. If I stayed in Chicago all winter goodness knows whom I might make a mistake and choose, try as hard as I might to remember that my ancestors came over with Christopher Columbus, and I'd hate awfully to disappoint you and mother.

"It seems so much safer to me to go where people are perfectly lovely and all that!" she continued. "And you do make such a fuss about Georgie Bitters, who comes to see me sometimes."

"Huh!" the wary father sniffed. "This sounds like blackmail or an ultimatum to me and I must say——"

"Why, I don't know what you're talking about!" the beguiling daughter cried in great astonishment, industriously parting his hair in a new line with her fingertips. "Dilly's best friend, Prunia Whipple of Lake Forest, was at Pomegranate inn only two weeks before she became engaged to a simply marvelous man from New York and they are going to Italy on their wedding trip and his people are just crazy about Prunia! Some girls do have all the luck—not that I should go to California with any such notions in my mind at all! I am terribly interested in the romantic early history of the place and its missions and grapevines and—er—all that! And that reminds me that I wanted to ask if I couldn't take some golf lessons before we go, because most of the men out there——"

"You wouldn't have any time for golf if you are deeply interested in missions," explained her wary father. "By spending eight working hours a day every day for two months an energetic and enthusiastic traveler could just about cover the outer edge of the lot. Golf lessons would be wasted."

"Well, you wouldn't expect me to walk about old missions till I dropped, would you!" remonstrated the beguiling young woman. "I'd have to have some sort of recreation, I guess! It does seem as tho you took no thought for my health at all! Maybe you haven't noticed that my throat has been bothering me an awful lot lately"

"You'll have to give up cigarettes," prophesied her parent.

"I would need hardly any new clothes," went on the beguiling daughter. "Just three or four more sports things and a few evening gowns and a new riding outfit. And I expect I might as well have a new motor wrap —one of those wooly imported ones that last just forever, so in reality they don't cost as much as it seems at first —and Pomegranate inn is so popular that you ought to wire right away for reservations. I think you are looking pale and tired these days, father, and you owe it to yourself—oh, yes, Dilly says there are sure to be a lot of high-up naval officers there for a while—and mother would just love to look at the poppy fields and sit on the pleasant front veranda and do her Italian hemstitching! Let me write out the telegram."

"Nix!" the wary father said with some violence. "Not with my anaemic bank balance! But I wouldn't for the world discourage your historical ambitions and I'll be glad to send home the best book I can buy on early missions! You can bundle up and read it on the back porch and get all the fresh air going! Besides saving all those clothes!"

"I think you are just as mean as you can be!" snapped the beguiling daughter, ceasing to be in the least beguiling. "Misunderstanding me this way! The idea! I'm going to call up George Bitters right away and tell him to come over!"

"Well, I might as well suffer one way as another." sighed the wary father very sadly.

Opportunists.

"We were invited to ride to White Beach yesterday," said the woman who never went much of anywhere.

"It was a lovely day, you must have enjoyed it," replied her listener.

"Oh, I didn't go," explained the other. "You see, there was only an hour between the time she asked us after church and time to start. And I knew I wouldn't get everything done that I had to. We had to eat dinner and I hadn't made the beds."

"Good gracious, you didn't give up a lovely long afternoon's ride for the sake of having the beds made, did you?" exclaimed the second in horror.

The speaker acknowledged that she had.

It wasn't as tho she'd be asked again the next Sunday, either. Such chances came seldom—perhaps the woman who never went much could tell why.

The folks who really seem to get the most fun out of life are the ones who don't back away from opportunity when it comes running to meet them. In other words, they have a sense of values and realize that the beds will never run away, but a beautiful spring afternoon by the sea is a fleeting thing.

One little housewife used to realize that, and when her roll-right-along friends telephoned in the middle of wash-day morning and invited her to ride into town (wash-day being only Monday to them), she took her hands out of the suds, left the sheets in the wringer and was ready in the alloted fifteen minutes.

How about it? Do you let yourself be swamped by deadly humdrum, so that you haven't even adventure enough left in your soul to pop up and walk thru the door of delight when it's held open for you, or are you one of those wise persons—Opportunists?—Designer.

Ambitious for Education.

"Pa, where was Babe Ruth born?" "Couldn't tell you, son." "Where was Jack Dempsey born?" "Don't know that either." "Pa, will you buy me a history of the United States?"—Denver Parrakeet.

Amplifying the Crystal.

4—A Regenerative Amplifier.

One of my readers sends an enthusiastic account of the results that he has had with an original and very logical form of amplifier for his crystal set.

In his method, which is shown in the accompanying diagram, he virtually adds the bulb circuit which is known as the double circuit hook-up with the plate variometer. He uses his audio frequency transformer in place of the vario-coupler where it was with his crystal.

This is another method of amplifying a crystal which is very well worth trying and it has the advantage of not making it necessary to throw any apparatus away when you have decided to use another hook-up in this series.

Here the crystal hook-up is the standard one that is used with either a vario-coupler or a loose coupler. You simply insert a double circuit jack in place of the phones on the crystal, wiring the two outer blades of the jack to the present telephone connections and wiring the two inner blades to the two primary binding posts of your transformer. If these binding posts are not marked P to show that they are primaries, they will be marked B and P.

The other two binding posts will be marked S to show that they are secondary or else they will be marked G and F.

You will need another twenty-three plate variable condenser to get proper tuning of the grid circuit in this hook-up, but the phone and the plate circuit is tuned by means of a variometer shown in the illustration. The variometer also has the ability to build up signals.

I am again using two phone jacks in this circuit and I cannot too strongly urge the fan to use this method with a plug on his phone cords because wherever a crystal detector is inserted in a radio circuit there is always a chance that the cat whisker is not on a sensitive spot and it is only by means of a plug and a jack that you can test out the various parts of the hook-up one at a time to find where your trouble is.

If you want to add another step of amplification to this outfit you can use the same hook-up given in the first article in this series.

In that case you would use a double circuit jack instead of the two-bladed jack shown in the illustration. You would wire the two outer blades of the double jack in the same way as is shown here to the plus of the B battery and the variometer and would then wire the two inner blades to the first two connections shown in that hook-up for one stage of amplification.

Have You Read Charles M. Keefer on Policy Lapses?

Have you read what Charlie Keefer has to say about the lapses of Life Insurance policies? Keefer, who is state manager for the Kansas State Life Insurance Company, and president of a local organization of insurance men, conducts an insurance "column" in one of the Lincoln Sunday papers. He fills it with live, up-to-date matter realtive to insurance generally, but right now we are interested only in this paragraph from Sunday's paper:

Lapses were exceedingly heavy in insurance during 1922, and they are said to be higher now than they were six months ago. On the other hand, the companies are writing a large amount of new business. Industrial insurance men say that even in prosperous times they have a heavy lapse ratio due to the fact that as wage-earners get more wages they start to buying ordinary life. Other causes are numerous, one peculiar thing about line being that much of it is personal, and if an agent changes companies he takes most of his old customers with him. Lapses are costly and the industrial chiefs say that a fortune awaits the man who can stop them.

Lapses are not confined, however, to industrial insurance—the small policies with premium payments weekly or monthly. Many policyholders of ordinary life insurance, paying annually, semi-annually, or even quarterly, find it next to impossible to meet the next premium—largely because they have made no preparations for payment—and they take the cash surrender value and drop out.

Mr. Keefer truly says that "lapses are costly." The heaviest burden falls on the policyholder, whose family or dependents are left without the protection they had; but they are a loss to the agent who wrote the business and the company as well. The policyholder may or may not be able to take out new insurance later on—but his premium rate will necessarily be higher, for he will be several years older.

Our Eltelic contract enables you to meet your premiums, no matter how many there may be or how much, with 12 equal monthly payments, and your premium money earns you 5 per cent while it is in our hands. Already we have helped a great many with this trust savings plan. We can help you. Ask for circular and copy of the contract.

Reworking.

That the economy of reworking waste paper is being realized to a greater extent as time advances is indicated by the fact that during the year 1922 United States paper mill interests spent more than $50,000,000 for waste paper. This amount of money shows an increase of $20,000,000 over the sum expended for waste paper during the previous year. Here is real progress, indeed.

This saving of $50,000,000 means that money was actually picked up from waste bins, ash cans and from the gutters of public highways. Had this vast quantity of waste paper been burned or destroyed in other ways it would have meant the loss of the big sum mentioned. In truth it would have meant a far greater loss than that, as it would have caused the further depletion of American forests, a loss which never could be regained.

Some idea of the damage that has been spared the American forests may be understood from the figures representing the consumption of waste paper by the United States paper mills during the year 1922. These figures are 1,963,000 tons, or 3,926,000,000 pounds! This waste paper was reconverted into various kinds of new paper and board. The old magazines were turned into book papers; the old newspapers and mixed papers were made over into pulp boards of the kinds used for the manufacture of paper boxes.

Altho great savings have already been accomplished by the collection and reworking of waste paper, it is a startling fact that every year millions of dollars worth of waste paper is being destroyed by the people in general. Untold tons of magazines, newspapers, old wrapping paper, etc., are cast into fires or thrown into the streets. The people who cause this loss little realize that they are inflicting a serious injury to the forests, as many noble trees will have to be cut down to replace the loss.—The Nation's Business.

MARTYR OF WORLD WAR.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Feb. 6.—One of the martyrs of the world war—an ewe that gave of her blood 4,000 times to aid soldiers wounded in action—died at the navy yard here recently. Scores of lives were saved, physicians stated, by the transfusions of the healthy blood of the ewe to the wounded men. It is estimated the ewe gave over forty gallons of blood to the soldiers.

The British empire steel corporation mines at Bell Island, said to have been closed in connection with the Ruhr situation, were to reopen.

MEN AND THINGS

The situation at the capitol with respect to the future form of the administrative part of the state government remains tangled. The governor hasn't got enough votes to get thru his executive council plan which gives him all the patronage, and the republicans haven't got enough votes to pass anything they can agree upon over the governor's veto. The new men who have familiarized themselves with the facts no longer believe that direct state taxes can be reduced to any considerable extent. They have found out that most of the tax dollar goes to support the educational institutions, feed, clothe and house the state wards and build new roads. The governor has the republicans, politically speaking, in somewhat of a hole, as, if they do not agree to his plan, he can go out to the people two years hence and tell them he couldn't reduce taxes because of this fact.

One man out of every fifty or sixty in Europe is still fighting or in the pay of some government ready and equipped to do battle. If we had that same proportion in Lincoln there would be 1,000 men in uniform parading our streets, and a possible thousand families the rest of us would have to support for the pleasure and comfort of having a soldier to protect us whether we needed protection or not. Europeans know as well as we do that that is too big a burden to be safely borne, but the common people don't seem to have much to say about it.

You can depend on those canny Scotchmen who really rule the financial destinies of England to get the best of us with respect to the debt of billions owing by Great Britain to the United States. Have you noticed how they did it? They have put an import tax on rubber from the colonies they control and which control the rubber trade of the world. We use more rubber here than in the rest of the world combined, and in the future every time a man buys a tire he will be paying part of the Englishman's debt to him in the form of an increased price That is why the administration at Washington is about to investigate the possibilities of rubber growing in the Philippines.

You hear a lot about the waste in government, of the extra number of employes needed above what could do the work if everybody worked faithfully and full time and of the better wages and salaries paid them than in private employment. You doubtless swell up with indignation over a condition nobody has ever been able to remedy. But do you know that the postoffice department pays out a million dollars in salaries every year to men and women for re-addressing mail that you and I wrongly or only partly addressed? When you add in the wasted stamps you will get an idea of the cost of this sort of carelessness.

A preacher who is a great fisherman and lover of the outdoors said the other day that he had never found behind the prison bars a man who likes to fish or loves a dog. We wouldn't be surprised if there was not something to that. The criminal is gregarious; he wants to run in gangs. He flies directly to the big cities immediately after he has pulled off a robbery. If he tramps it it is not because he loves the outdoors, but because he can make a living this way without work. A man with a black soul cannot be content with it only as company.

We hear less of plagiarism now than we did ten or twenty years ago. We remember that twenty-five years ago the university rocked with the awful discovery that some debater had "lifted" his speech. Are we grown more honest and have quit this or less honest and do not mind it? Every time a person sits down to write he draws very largely, for what he sets down, upon his memory and unless he possesses a very retentive one he finds himself unable to tell exactly what he has thought and digested of his own and what is that of somebody else picked and packed away.

And does it so much matter to the reader? Is he not better served if I, for instance, do some picking and choosing for him in fields that are more or less closed to him by circumstances, and by running these ideas thru my own consciousness and conception of them make them clearer to him? Every writer borrows ideas, consciously or unconsciously, just as you pass on to the next one you meet something you received from the last one you conversed with. There is a great mass of opinion held in common by us all and from which we subtract what we wish when we proceed to talk about matters. A writer's conscience usually attends to these matters for him better than any statute against plagiarism would. The reader is less concerned with the source than the way in which it is presented.

BRAIN TESTS

(By Sam Loyd.)

8 Minutes to Answer This.

Despite his annual rebuff, the cricket dropped in upon the ant at the end of harvest time and broached the subject of a small load to tide over the season. Said the ant: "Do not think to find me a foolish —— fellow —— of your self-inflicted troubles. I admit you are a —— little chap with a charming voice and a —— mind and —— in your speech. Why you let the springs of industry lie —— in the —— season; when there is —— work for all of us I .... understand. You must —— that misery and —— are invariably —— upon improvidence. Nevertheless, I shall not be entirely —— to your appeal. On the way out of my garden you may stop at the —— and slake your thirst."

Can you complete the ant's homily by placing in the blanks appropriate words ending with "ant"?

Answer to Yesterday's.
